A Big Discussion.
It Will Be Twins.
He Came and Jumped.
Kemal Wins, Allah Loses.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE BIG DISCUSSION of the moment concerns relief of Americans in need and how to go about it, if at all. There seems to be more hesitation about relieving Americans, by the way, than there was about relieving Armenians and other foreigners in a war that we did not start. We did start this depression war.

SENATOR BORAH in a ravagely magnificent speech that might make him president some day if he is not careful, tells of a mother and her children eating "grease and sour meal that you would not give to a dog."

Not only would Borah have an extra session if necessary, but says he:

"Let us stay here until every starving child and woman has been taken care of by the government, whose duty it is to take care of its suffering citizens."

THE FIGHT is on between Borah and President Hoover and their respective adherents.

Yesterday the President issued a statement saying that the government should not do anything until charity, meaning the Red Cross, has failed.

The people should rely on mutual self-help, says President Hoover, quoting the words of Grover Cleveland under similar circumstances:

"It is for the people to support the government, the government should not support the people."

Senator Borah might and probably will reply:

"That was not said to the hungry Armenians, or Russians, or the European nations that needed ten thousand millions of our money to continue murdering each other."

SENATOR BORAH says the Red Cross is not strong enough to carry through the job. The government could certainly do it more cheaply, and efficiently, by employing men of the Army and Navy, as might be shown by printing the payroll of the Red Cross for the past year or so, showing how much of the money spent reaches salaried individuals, and not starving stomachs.

IF CONGRESS means to do anything for those in want and should hand the money directly to them, regardless of that terrible word "dole," the money would be spent in stores, would help pay clerks' wages, and start business going.

However, that is for the wise men at Washington to decide.

MR. CYRUS H. K. CURTIS' conservative paper prints this in big type: "Birth of twins expected by Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt." A few years ago, such a positive announcement would have been impossible, not to say in shocking taste. But now, the X-ray looks through intervening tissue, and reveals the two little skeletons, with cunning crooked legs, tiny little hands that will never know hard work, and there is no doubt about its being twins.

THESE LITTLE children will be the direct descendants, in the sixth generation, of Commodore Vanderbilt, founder of the family, who was able to recognize a good idea, and changed from rowing a boat to getting hold of a railroad, and some millions.

How quickly generations pass, especially in the case of the very rich and very poor. Both classes marry young, the poor to make life bearable, the rich, because so many offer to marry them.

A WELL DRESSED young man got off in New York yesterday, at the Grand Central station, took the elevator in the Biltmore Hotel close by, to the fourteenth floor, and jumped. His wrist watch was marked "Jerry M. Noonan, of Santa Fe, N. M." And he had written a telegram saying:

"I have arrived at my final destination."

That telegram raises the interesting question: Do we reach a FINAL destination, when we jump here?

It says in the Bible:

"In my Father's house are many mansions."

Do we go to some one of them, and stay there forever, or do we travel from one to another, perhaps from one planet, or big star, to another, on through the series of millions and millions of universes as far as relativity will permit, with constant change and new experiences, and, perhaps, improvement all the way? That would be an attractive program.

KEMAL PASHA, forceful Turk, disagrees violently with orthodox Mohammedans. They said he was disobeying orders, erecting statues to himself and others, taking the fez from men's heads, veils from women's faces.

They were right. But in the fight with Mohammed, Kemal has won.

A STRING of 28 corpses now swinging on gibbets, in the cold wind, prove that Kemal is the boss, and that there is no longer a caliph, direct representative of the prophet, and of Allah.

Two or three hundred more may be hanged, to swing in the same fashion, as a warning that Kemal Pasha is here, Allah and Mohammed far away.

AS THE WIND "bloweth where it listeth," so the earthquakes, and disasters following, strike where they please.

Senate Plan for Compromise On Relief Fails; Threat Of Extra Session Grows

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(AP.) — Compromise negotiations on the congressional relief deadlock slowed up today after President Hoover gave a cool reception to proposals for settlement suggested by Senate Republican leaders.

Fears of an extra session were revived at the Capitol as Senators Watson, of Indiana, and McNary, of Oregon, the Republican chieftains, returned from the White House empty-handed.

Neither Watson nor McNary would discuss the talk after the White House breakfast parley.

VISIT PRESIDENT

They went to the President with the compromise suggested to the Senate yesterday by Senator Harrison (Dem.), of Mississippi, on the $25,000,000 Red Cross relief fund, which Mr. Hoover and the House Republicans have refused to accept.

The Harrison compromise was that a federal fund be made available to be spent only in the event that charitable organizations found it impossible to administer relief.

The Mississippian put it forward with the contention that the responsibility for the extra session would be upon the Republicans if the stand against any compromise was insisted upon.

Despite the gloom of Senators Watson and McNary as they left the White House, however, there were still signs of a break in the tense situation.

MRS. CALVIT UPHELD BY ACTRESS

Bessie Clayton Says She Heard Publisher Promise To 'Take Care' of Girl

Lillian Russell had only one love — her daughter, Dorothy —and did not love her husband, Alexander P. Moore, the latter told Mrs. Elizabeth Henderson, of 631 College avenue, Mrs. Henderson testified in Orphans Court today in the suit of the daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Russell O'Reilly Calvit, to break Moore's will.

Moore agreed to leave half of his estate to Dorothy, according to testimony of Miss Bessie Clayton, retired New York actress.

Miss Clayton testified that she had heard Moore make this promise in the Broadway Theater, New York, six weeks before Moore and Miss Russell were married in the summer of 1912.

Miss Clayton testified she was present when Moore and Miss Russell were married in the Hotel Schenley, June 12, 1912.

WILLED $1,000

Mrs. Calvit was cut off with $1,000 in the will of her stepfather, who left an estate of nearly $1,000,000. He left the Queen of Spain $100,000 for charity and $25,000 to the widow of Enrico Caruso, famous tenor.

Miss Clayton, dressed in a close-fitting black gown, with black hat to match, was visibly exhausted as she was closely questioned under cross-examination by Attorney John S. Weller for the Union Trust Company, executor of the Moore estate, which is defending the will. She was excused after testifying nearly two hours.

The scene in the dressing room of the Broadway Theater when Moore was alleged to have made his promise to support Miss Russell's daughter was thus described by Miss Clayton:

"I had gone to Lillian's dressing room the night before the Weber and Fields revival, in which she and I were starring, started on the road tour. Alex had been in New York for several weeks importuning Lillian to marry him. He was in her dressing room that night.

QUOTES LILLIAN

"Lillian spoke up and said: "'Alex, I will marry you on this condition: If I die I leave my money to you. If you die I want you to leave your money to me. I will leave everything

TWO GROUPS HINT COURT BATTLE

North Side and Downtown Associations to Consider Taxpayer Suit Tomorrow

The North Side Town Hall Association today joined forces with the Downtown Town Hall group in an attempt to block the construction of the hall at Fifth and Ruskin avenues, Schenley Farms.

The possibility of a taxpayer's suit to hold up the Oakland project will be discussed at a joint meeting of the two groups called for tomorrow at 3 p. m.

PLANS AWAIT RULING

County Solicitor Mortimer B. Lesher will give an opinion Tuesday on the legality of allowing the Schenley Farms Company to erect a hall in Oakland without competitive bidding. Until this opinion is forthcoming, no definite steps will be taken by the county architect to prepare plans for the town hall.

The downtown group has been called together by James C. Chaplin, president, and the North Side organization by W. H. Newmyer, chairman. A gentlemen's agreement has existed between the two bodies to fight for a location somewhere in the downtown district or adjacent to it, Mr. Newmyer declared. He said:

"I cannot predict what will happen at the meeting, but there is a likelihood of a taxpayer's suit. Some blunders may be excused, but such a colossal blunder as that just made by the County Commissioners

CARAWAY HURLS 'LIE' CHALLENGE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Senator Caraway (Dem.), of Arkansas, said today he had telephoned three times to Representative Cramton (Rep.), of Michigan, and challenged the House member to repeat to him personally his accusation on the floor yesterday that anyone who said he was seeking a federal job was "an unadulterated liar."

Each time, Caraway said, Cramton hung up the telephone on him. He added, however:

"I finally told him before he hung up the last time what I thought of him."

Caraway telephoned as well to Representative Treadway (Rep.), of Massachusetts, who also replied in the House to criticism by Caraway.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Feb. 4.—(AP.)—High wind today prevented Capt. Malcolm Campbell, British race car driver, from attempting to better the world's automobile speed record of 231 miles an hour on the ocean speedway. He hopes to try tomorrow if conditions permit.

Huge Employment Drive Launched Here, Fund To Aid Jobless

A comprehensive program for the stabilization of employment in the Pittsburgh district, whereby an employing agency will be established to list unemployed after investigation and provide employment, was ordered initiated by the Allegheny County Emergency Association, organized by a group of leading employers of the district, after a meeting yesterday.

Financing of the program will be met by a fund now being raised by the association in this preferred order:

First, by canvass of 3,000 employers of the Pittsburgh district on the basis of contribution of an average day's payroll for 1929, expected to yield more than $1,000,000.

Second, by solicitation of public-spirited citizens.

Third, by solicitation of employed unaffected by the depression on the basis of one day's pay.

Setting up the machinery to put the program in operation as promptly as possible has been delegated to an operating committee named by Arthur E. Braun, chairman; F. R. Phillips, vice president of the Philadelphia Company; Frank B. Bell, of the Edgewater Steel Company; Edgar J. Kaufmann, president of Kaufmann's department store; John F. Casey, president of the John F.

Arriving troops, he found, were trained for trench fighting which, for the British and French had brought only a deadlock with the Germans. Juror Turns Prosecutor In Woman's Theft Trial

John Clancy, of 203 Herndon street, a railroad fireman and juror No. 11 in the larceny trial of Ann Dunseth, of 365 Ophelia street, rose in the jury box today to assume the role of prosecutor.

As Mrs. Anna May Gallagher, of Knox avenue, sister of Madeline Walsh, who charges her $125 fur was stolen by the defendant, went on the stand, Clancy, from the jury box, outlined to the court a plan of questioning.

Mrs. Gallagher had testified she had seen the fur on a woman in the foyer of a downtown theater. Clancy suggested that the district attorney elicit a minute description of the woman in question.

The method was adopted by the prosecutor, James Geltz, and the juror was thanked by the latter and Judge Frank P. Patterson.

The defense was to open this afternoon.

Inquiry Sure, Governor Says, Attacking Bus Lines and Calling for Complaints

By E. W. PRENDERGAST,
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 4.—Towering above all other issues in the Pinchot legislative warfare, the public utility investigating problem shifted today from the Capitol to hotel and executive rooms.

Its shadow blanketing all other proposed legislation, the resolutions that are for the time being the property of the Senate kept many legislators in the city discussing the possibilities and fears.

On the radio last night Gov. Pinchot took his message to the people as he had promised in the campaign. He reviewed events of the past three weeks, particularly stressing the need of a probe utility investigation that would completely inquire into the abuses he alleges.

SEEKS BOARD INQUIRY

After pointing out that both the Salus and Earnest resolutions were limited, and did not open the door of investigation wide enough, the Governor mentioned a few items his resolution would try to bring out. He said:

"There is sure to be an investigation. We want to know whether the utilities overcharge the people, and by how much. We want to know how much water they have put in their stock. We want to know who owns and controls them, and what they spend for propaganda, and who pays for it. We want to know what they spend for political activities, and whether they charge that, too, as running expenses and make us consumers pay that money back.

"We want to know the whole truth about the public utilities which made such a remarkable effort to defeat one candidate for governor and elect the other and later to elect Senator Davis as president pro tempore of the Senate.

ATTACKS BUS LINES

"No investigation would be complete that did not go into the affairs of the utilities themselves. Are their rates as finally fixed by the Public Service Commission based upon an entirely fraudulent valuation? What is their cost of producing current in Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Pittsburgh?

"What are the great bus companies doing to the public? To the operators of bus lines who have preceded them in business—the little fellows whose routes are 25 to 40 miles?

"Is it true or isn't it true that through trickery the big fellows are stealing the little fellows' business?

"These are among the reasons why I insist that to have lasting result an investigation must go into the secrets of the utilities. Why do railroad companies loan private Pullman cars to members of the Public Service Commission? Why are public service commissioners so constantly and fervently intimate with representatives of the electric utilities? Why were utility lawyers so bitterly against me in last fall's campaign? Why are they so bitter now?"

ASKS PUBLIC'S HELP

The governor added that utility representatives rave because he proposes a square deal for everyone, including the public. He said he had a good deal of information now, but needed more. He asked the people to send him complaints accompanied by facts and not to expect replies.

Gov. Pinchot after meeting more than 50 representatives of labor in the mansion yesterday afternoon, told them he would consider their request for a $10,000,000 unemployment relief fund. Included in the group were Philip Murray, international vice president of the United Mine Workers, and Patrick Fagan, district president, both of Pittsburgh.

The governor also expects to hold a final conference on the election reform bill late today. The bill, which the election conference committee expected to present last Monday or yesterday, was held up by the governor so a corrupt practice provision limiting candidates to expenditures of 10 cents a vote could be inserted.

The bill may, if agreement is reached, go in next week.

TALKING IT OVER :-: By Quin Hall

BANK CLOSED IN E. PITTSBURGH

The People's State Bank of East Pittsburgh was closed today by the State Banking Department at the request of the bank's board of directors. Chief Examiner J. D. Swigart was placed in charge.

Resources of the bank are said to be good, and with the recovery of the bond market, it is said the institution probably will pay in full.

The untimely death of L. L. Swaney, president last October, and inability to realize quickly on assets were given as the cause of the bank's closing, together with an increase in withdrawals since last Saturday.

12 YEARS OLD

Organized about 12 years ago, the bank's capital is $50,000, surplus $15,000, assets $500,000.

Since the death of President Swaney, who was found dying of monoxide fumes in the garage at his home, 1526 Murray avenue, last October, various reports have been in circulation in the borough. Today Examiner Swigart stated that the bank had collected on the $25,000 bond of the deceased president.

J. C. Evans was elected president to succeed Swaney, and efforts were made to rehabilitate the bank. Due to the depression, the task was too great.

Directors of the bank today stated they hope to effect a reorganization soon and to re-open the institution with a larger capital and surplus.

President J. C. Evans today issued this statement:

"The difficulties encountered through the defalcation of L. L. Swaney, former president and his sudden death last October, plus the unjustified rumors that recently have been circulated caused a steady decline in deposits and increasing withdrawals.

"The board of directors believe depositors will receive 100 cents on the dollar, but deemed it necessary to take this action to protect fully the depositors. The directors hope to effect reorganization soon and to reopen with a large capitalization and surplus.

"Most of Mr. Swaney's defalcations were recovered from the insurance company which carried his bond."

The bank's 3,000 depositors had a total of over $400,000 in the bank.

The People's bank has no connection with any other financial institution.

chosen at the last election were now in office, the Senate's $25,000,000 relief proposal would have carried the House by a 33 majority."

The Nebraska Republican blamed the present deadlock on failure to enact his proposed constitutional amendment abolishing the short session of Congress.

Senator Walsh (Dem.), Montana, said:

"The present relief deadlock between the two houses is due in large measure to the votes of men who have been defeated."

Meanwhile Col. Campbell Hodges, military aide to President Hoover, was en route by airplane today to Little Rock, Ark., to co-operate in a survey of drought conditions for the Chief Executive and the War Department.

Hodges will be joined there by Capt. Lewis E. Pick, an aide to Mr. Hoover, when as secretary of commerce he toured the Mississippi flood region. Pick then was division engineer at New Orleans.

POWER BATTLE BEFORE SENATE

By PIERCE MILLER,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The rupture between the Senate and President Hoover over confirmation of three members of the Federal Power Commission was again in the fore today.

The Senate agreed to consider the nominations of George Otis Smith, as chairman, and Marcel Garsaud and Claude L. Draper, today. Their action in dismissing Charles A. Russell, solicitor of the old commission, and William V. King, chief accountant, precipitated the attack on the status of the offending commissioners.

Senator Walsh (Dem.), of Montana, announced he would seek to bring before the Senate his resolution directing the district attorney here to institute ouster proceedings in the District Supreme Court.

It was probable Walsh would await action on the nominations before proceeding with the ouster resolution.

BISHOP CANNON HOBBLES TO TRIAL

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Showing unmistakable signs of the strain he is undergoing, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., hobbled into the Mt. Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church at 10 o'clock this morning to face an array of witnesses called to testify concerning charges of his misconduct.

Police were again on guard to hold back the curious and Bishop Cannon again endeavored to circumvent the photographers.

PRELIMINARIES OVER

Information leaking from behind the tightly closed doors of the ecclesiastical trial was that the preliminaries in the case had been cleared away yesterday and that today the bishop's accusers were to present their evidence.

Whether the bishop was to be permitted to interrogate and cross-examine his accusers was a question which the 12 ministers who comprise the "jury" would not answer. Bishop William N. Ainsworth, presiding, reiterated that no information concerning either the charges or the procedure would be given out until the hearing has been completed.

SON WAITS OUTSIDE

Bishop Cannon's son, David, his office assistant, remained outside the church this morning, waiting for his father to reappear. He lectured the reporters outside the church, telling them that if they "would believe more in God and quit preying on the public" they would "get along better."

To prevent their identities from becoming known, the ministers taking part in the trial address each other as "Brother Smith" and "Brother Jones" when in the hearing of outsiders.

Four witnesses went into the church this morning, but they declined to tell their names. One of them was George P. Adams, secretary of the Blackstone Female Institute, at Blackstone, Va., of which Bishop Cannon was the president for many years. Another was said to be a "Detective Morgan," of Richmond, Va., and another, R. Adam, a Richmond attorney.

'NUMBERS' LEAK WORRIES POOLS

Operators of two Hill district "numbers" pools, the biggest in the city it is said, returned from New York today, discouraged over prospects of operating safely on the Treasury-Customs figures.

They reported that the "number" had leaked out early yesterday morning, in time to play on the New Jersey pools, and that the New York pools operating on the new basis had shut down, temporarily.

The Pittsburgh envoys, too, brought back a New York plan to operate on a number obtained from pari-mutuel horse racing cards. The scheme was quickly given up when it was admitted by race enthusiasts that the number could easily be "fixed."

Decision on a new basis for the lottery seemed further away than ever, today.

One large pool already on the new basis met serious embarrassment yesterday when it paid off a large sum on the incorrect total before it learned of the mistake. Payment was switched to the correct number while, it is said, persons who had been told they won on the earlier number complained because they thought they were being cheated.

Delay Detectives' Hearing in 'Numbers'

A postponement of the "numbers" racket charges against Detectives Robert Burke and James Noon was announced today by Public Safety Director James M. Clark. The detectives were scheduled to appear today in connection with the charges made against them in East End Police Court by Dominic Cinquerani, a "numbers" agent.

HOOVER ENTERS BATTLE OVER CASH BONUS

Facts Laid Before President In Parley; Compromise Plan Seen as Probable

By WILLIAM S. NEAL,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—President Hoover has taken a hand in the battle being waged in both branches of Congress over proposals for cash payment of the three and a half billion dollar soldiers' "bonus," it was learned today.

The situation, so far as the House is concerned, was laid before a representative of the President in a conference with Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, majority leader; Representative Snell (Rep.), of New York, chairman of the Rules Committee, and Representative Hawley (Rep.), of Oregon, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

COMPROMISE LIKELY

The President's representative was informed, it is understood, that sentiment is strong in the House for granting of at least a part of the demands of veterans' organizations, and that a compromise may be the only way out.

With the President interesting himself in the problem, the Senate Finance Committee decided to withhold action on bills for cash payment of the adjusted compensation certificates, and permit the House Ways and Means Committee to initiate legislation.

The Ways and Means Committee, in the midst of hearing statements from business and financial leaders that cash payment would postpone the return of prosperity by upsetting the nation's financial structure, will attempt to take action on bills before it on Saturday.

OPPOSES PAYMENT

Testifying before the committee today, Rome C. Stephenson, of South Bend, Ind., president of the American Bankers' Association, declared that payment of the bonus would plunge the country into another economic depression. He said:

"I have the viewpoint on this proposition of many of my associates in banking and in the American Bankers' Association. Universally they are unalterably opposed to it strictly on the principle of sound public policy."

Stephenson said that floating of a huge bond issue to pay the certificates would depress the price of bonds, perhaps raise taxes and make more difficult the financing of legitimate industry.

He reiterated the belief of other financial leaders who have appeared before the committee, that a gradual business revival is ahead. He continued:

"However, if this bonus plan payment is to eventuate, it would seem that the hopes are ill-founded—that there is still another depressing economic surprise in store for the country to struggle with before it can consider itself on the clear highway to better times."

N. J. Court Ignores Judge Clark's Ruling

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Federal Judge William A. Clark's decision that the Eighteenth Amendment is invalid was disregarded today in what is believed the first test case brought under it in a state court.

Judge Albert H. Holland, of the Common Pleas Court of Morris County, held that George Snyder was not entitled to compensation for injuries received while working in a saloon because he was "engaged in an illegal enterprise, the sale of liquor."

U. S. Speeds World's Largest Airship

LAKEHURST, N. J., Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Assembly of the world's largest non-rigid airship, naval officials announce, will begin in a few weeks at the air station here. YOUNG ASKS BANK LAW CHANGE

Financier Urges Amendment, If Necessary, to Correct 'Unstable' Conditions

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Amendment of the constitution to protect the American people from a recurrence of present unstable banking conditions was held today by Owen D. Young, New York financier, to be the only recourse if it is found the federal government "has no authority" to apply corrective measures.

Testifying before the Senate Banking Investigating Committee, Young said:

"We have seen thousands of bank failures and it is a great reflection on the American people if they can't get protection against this condition. And this is a period of prosperity, of disturbed economic conditions, true, but of prosperity.

"If it finally is decided that the federal government hasn't authority to correct this, I see no way out except through amendment to the constitution.

"We should try the first step and if it is found not effective, the second. The country can't go on this way."

EX-POLICEMAN SENTENCED

Edward Sullivan, 33, a former city patrolman, of 3520 Butler street, was sentenced to from two and a half to five years' imprisonment in Criminal Court today after his conviction on a robbery charge.

The commonwealth contended that Sullivan, Thomas Daugherty, same address, and an unidentified man held up F. A. and William Ward's barbeque on Camp Horne road last July. Both men were arrested following the holdup.

Daugherty jumped his bail. Sullivan denied the crime, saying that he had been drunk and had entered the barbeque when he heard Daugherty calling for help.

FALL'S APPEAL PLEA ENDS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(INS.)—Attorneys for Harry M. Blackmer, Denver oil magnate, who elected to quit this country for France rather than testify in the government's prosecution of Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair in the oil scandals during the Harding administration, appealed to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals today to set aside the $60,000 fine assessed him for contempt of court. The arguments will end today.

Meanwhile, counsel for Fall completed their argument for an appeal against the sentence of one year in jail and a fine of $100,000 given the former Interior Department secretary upon his conviction of bribery. He was accused of accepting, as a bribe, $100,000 from Edward L. Doheny, California oil financier.

Woman, Former City Treasurer, Arrested

PENDLETON, Ore., Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Union County authorities were here today to return Mrs. Emma Fowler to La Grange, Ore., where a grand jury will investigate an alleged shortage of $112,000 in her accounts as city treasurer. She was arrested yesterday.

Mrs. Fowler had served as city treasurer 10 years, but consolidation of offices eliminated her position February 1.

MURDER JURY DEADLOCKED

Although 20 hours have elapsed since the jury trying Philip Ruffer for the murder of Lawrence D. Green, 26, of 256 Edmond street, retired, a verdict has not been reached. The jurors retired yesterday afternoon, and the court is awaiting the verdict.

The commonwealth contends that Ruffer shot Green after an argument which grew out of Green's failure to pay for a bottle of pop he had purchased in Ruffer's confectionery store in Lawrenceville.

The defense, set up by Attorney Frank F. Canuti, was that the shooting was accidental, and that it occurred during a struggle between the two men. Assistant District Attorney Earl R. Adair prosecuted the case.

Practical Jokers Attempt To Bury Man Alive

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Found by police in a coffin-like box on a lonely road near a cemetery early today, George Wittbrod, 34, a salesman, told the officers he had been kidnaped, gagged and tortured by a gang of hoodlums who tried to leave him in an open grave.

Wittbrod, whose left hand is crippled, said that seven men took him from a pool room as a "practical joke," put him in an automobile and drove to the cemetery. He lost consciousness and when he woke up he found himself tied to a stone cross in the graveyard. When he jerked one of his arms free the men found a wooden box near a newly dug grave. After gagging him they forced him into it, nailed down the lid and tried to throw it into the grave.

The box, however, did not fit so the abductors tied a rope to the box, fastening the other end to the automobile and dragged it to the point where Wittbrod was found.

Acting on information given them by Wittbrod, police arrested seven youths all 6 feet tall. They confessed the abduction, police said, but argued that it was "just a joke." They refused to explain references to Wittbrod as a "stool-pigeon."

Coolidge Praises Job Assurance to Workers

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Feb. 4.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Months ago one of these dispatches suggested it would help business if large employers would make it known that no more employes would now be discharged. When a few are laid off the rest fear they may be next. That feeling contracts the usual amount of their purchases. They cut expenses against the possible day of being out of work. That is one reason why savings bank deposits have increased and consumption has diminished. Then there come more discharges. The process is a vicious circle.

Calvin Coolidge

Twenty-five large employers have announced publicly that as far as they are concerned they will break that circle by ceasing any present discharges. Many other employers have adopted the same policy without formal statement. This good news not only involves half a million employes directly but by its influence will help many times that number. Every employer who can should follow this example. It is a practical, constructive and sound action worth many proclamations. The paralysis of fear will be removed and confidence promoted. The fortunate employes involved have a corresponding obligation to co-operate in breaking the circle by resuming normal expenditures according to their means.

Family Row Over Henderson Mansion Stirs Capital

OFFERS U. S. A HOME!

MRS. JOHN B. HENDERSON, 90 . . . ONE OF WORLD'S RICHEST

Mrs. Henderson, widow of a U. S. senator and one of the world's richest women, who has offered to give the government a $300,000 home at Washington, D. C., as a home for the Vice President.

HEIRESS NO KIN, SAYS WIDOW

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Mrs. John B. Henderson's offer to give the government a pretentious mansion as a home for the Vice President had resulted today into a family controversy which had capital society buzzing with gossip.

The 90-year-old widow of the late senator from Missouri issued two startling assertions following the filing of a suit by her granddaughter, Mrs. Beatrice Henderson Wholean, to prevent the gift.

Mrs. Henderson declared that Mrs. Wholean is not her real granddaughter. She further questioned a document in the District Supreme Court showing that she had adopted her granddaughter on December 30, 1924. She said:

"I have no recollection of signing it."

In this confused state of affairs, Mrs. Wholean remained silent. She declined to see newspapermen or to make any statement in reply to those of Mrs. Henderson.

REFUSES COMMENT

The story unfolded by Mrs. Henderson, for many years a social leader of the capital, came as a complete surprise. Mrs. Henderson said that her granddaughter was in fact a child adopted by her son, John B. Henderson, Jr., and his wife from a Charlestown (W. Va.) children's home, but represented as their own.

This, Mrs. Henderson said, was in July, 1906. Both her son and his wife are now dead. The child, Mrs. Henderson said, resided with her until her marriage to Joseph Wholean in 1927.

At the Mayflower Hotel, where the Wholeans reside, the husband told Universal Service that Mrs. Wholean had no statement to make in regard to Mrs. Henderson's story of her adoption. He said:

"She has no comment to make. She would not dignify any such story by commenting on it at all."

According to Mrs. Henderson, she first learned that her granddaughter was not the child of her son and daughter-in-law about 5 years old, through one of the old and trusted servants.

RECORD REVEALED

Today it was learned that a sealed record of adoption of "Beatrice Henderson" was filed in the District Supreme Court, and signed by "Mary Henderson." Until today the record had never been made public.

It stated that the petitioner declared that Beatrice Henderson had been born in the District of Columbia, exact date unknown, that there was no information whether the mother of the child was still alive.

The petition for adoption further stated that the child had been adopted by John B. Henderson, Jr., deceased, and his wife, Angelica Schuyler Crosby Henderson, also deceased, and that she had always been considered as the granddaughter of Mrs. Henderson.

But today Mrs. Henderson was almost emphatic that she had no recollection of signing the adoption petition. Furthermore she declared she would fight vigorously the suit of Mrs. Wholean to prevent giving Uncle Sam the $300,000 mansion as a house for the Vice President.

RUINS OF TWO HAYS FRAME HOUSES DESTROYED BY FIRE STARTED BY OVERHEATED FURNACE; FIVE PEOPLE ESCAPED

NEW ZEALAND HOMELESS 50,000

Survivors Relate Tales Of Horror as Buildings Crash, Flames Sweep On

By F. W. SIMMONDS
International News Service.

WELLINGTON, Feb. 5. (Thursday)—Based on reliable reports received here up to 1 o'clock this morning it is estimated that Tuesday's disastrous earthquake in the Hawke Bay province of North Island took a toll of at least 640 lives. At least 50,000 are homeless.

Police in Napier, which is a veritable shambles of dead and dying, estimate 500 are dead there.

Hastings, 20 miles southwest of Napier, will probably have a death roll of 100.

Thirty-one are known to be dead at Taradale, near Napier.

FIRES RAGE

While fires are still raging in Hastings and Napier and rescuers are attempting to reach buried victims, a further earth tremor was experienced late last night. The shocks have been so persistent that neither the rescuers nor dostitute townsmen paid any heed.

Fearing an outbreak of epidemic, authorities today ordered complete evacuation of Napier within two days. Scarcity of water and disruption of sanitary service counseled that precautionary step.

Bluejackets from the New Zealand cruisers Diomede and Dunedin were landed at Napier tonight to aid in bringing order out of chaos in the city. The two warships arrived from Auckland, having been dispatched urgently following receipt of first news of the seriousness of the disaster.

After being dormant for three years, geysers in the areas affected by the terrific earthquakes in the Hawke Bay district were playing freely today.

Some of the day nurses at the Napier public hospital sacrificed their lives when they attempted to rescue the night nurses who were asleep when the walls of the building collapsed. Others were crushed by falling walls when they went to the rescue of patients.

9 GIRLS ENTOMBED

Nine girls were also believed to have been entombed in the ruins of a draper shop at Hastings.

Fearful of further shakes, thousands of persons were sleeping on the Napier beaches.

Capt. Delaney, matron of the Salvation Army maternity home in Napier, arrived in Wellington tonight, bringing with her nine babies from the home. She said:

"When I felt the first quake I rushed out of the home into the garden where five babies were having sun baths. I was horrified as I saw the chimney of the home topple over and fall among the cradles.

VATICAN RADIO HEARD IN U. S.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Broadcast listeners in the United States heard a program today from the Vatican City station, HVJ.

Signals sent from Italy on 19.84 meters, were cut into the WJZ network of the National Broadcasting Company in tests preliminary to the proposed broadcast from Vatican City at the inauguration of the new station on February 12 when Pope Pius XI is expected to address the world.

Reception on this side of the Atlantic was as nearly perfect as engineers could hope. Listeners reported there was no change in quality or signal strength when the announcer in the New York studios stopped talking and cut in the speaker at Vatican City.

DAISY DE VOE'S GEMS RETURNED

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Jewelry worth $3,000, seized by the district attorney from Daisy De Voe when she was arrested for allegedly stealing from her employer, the redheaded Clara Bow, screen star, was turned over to Miss De Voe's attorney, William Beirne on a writ of attachment.

The jewelry included a 7$50 wrist watch, $250 diamond pin, $300 star sapphire ring and a $500 diamond and plantinum ring. Miss Bow charged some of the jewelry had been stolen from her, but the jury which convicted Miss De Voe of grand theft decided all the blonde secretary had taken was $825 from Miss Bow's special bank account for a fur coat.

Miss De Voe received a telegram from a man signing his name as Thomas P. Payne, oil operator, of Dallas, Tex., offering to help Daisy get out of jail. Said he would be glad to testify that he heard Miss Bow tell Daisy many times to draw checks on her account for the actress' expenses, which Miss Bow admitted when she was on the witness stand.

Awakened by the timely ringing of an alarm clock early today, Katherine Frograse, 18, of No. 63 Doer Terrace Hill, Hays, found her home in flames. Arousing her sleeping brothers and sisters, she led them to safety, as flames destroyed the two-story frame dwelling, and an adjoining vacant frame building. Five children, Katherine, 18; Joseph, 20; Julia, 11; Andrew, 9, and Margaret, 7, the family of Andrew Frograse, were asleep on the second floor of the home when fire, thought to have been caused by an overheated furnace, broke out. Aroused by Katherine, they were led to safety.

Battalion Chief J. H. Frazier estimated the damage to be $5,000.

Leonard said the formal charges against the officer might be made public later in the day at his office. He said that at least no reason was apparent at the time why they should not be.

CHAPLIN LAUDS 'TALKIES'

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—(INS.)—Charlie Chaplin, wordless comedian, for years recorded as an arch-foe to the talking motion pictures, today spoke up for the "talkies." He said:

"I am not opposed to the talking picture as an invention and am planning perhaps to direct a screen drama with dialogue for my next production. However, I shall not appear in the picture."

Screenland's first pantomimist arrived here for the opening of his latest picture, "City Lights," interpreted by critics as a defiance to the talkie industry. His first publicly announced conversion to the talkies was tinctured with his traditional individual viewpoint, as he added:

"The talkies have a great deal of vitality—they have added something to the silent medium. Of course, they are here to stay—but I prefer to appear without dialogue.

"If I ever do a talkie it will not be as Charlie Chaplin."

of the earth, is leveled to the ground, with more than a hundred dead, thousands injured, and perhaps many more, fires destroying buildings, the earthquake having cut off the water supply.

This disaster, amounting in money to millions of dollars, is the worst that ever has befallen the island of New Zealand. Roads are broken, bridges destroyed, the entire business district of the important town of Napier wiped out.

WHEN THE BIG bridge over the Hudson is completed, New York City will have its first above-ground connection with the rest of the American continent, and New York newspapers cannot agree on a name for the bridge. "Washington Memorial Bridge," which the Hearst papers recommended, is the official name thus far.

Mr. Mason, of the Post, wants to call it "Palisades Bridge" and Mr. Patterson, who has a newspaper, wants to call it the "Hudson Bridge." A wise compromise might call it the "Edison Bridge."

Edison brought light across the Hudson, from New Jersey to Manhattan and spread it all over the world.

This writer back in the night of time saw him putting lights in "Harry Hill's," where John L. Sullivan fought. It would please a good many Americans to honor Edison, the greatest man this country has developed since Lincoln, and to do it while he is alive to know about it.

OIL MAN'S WIFE FILES COUNTER DIVORCE SUIT

Seeks Third of His Income As Alimony; Misconduct Charged, Also Cruelty

Asking alimony of one-third of her husband's income, which she declared was between $15,000 and $20,000 a year, Mrs. Katherine Elizabeth Archibald, of 235 South Millvale avenue, filed in Common Pleas Court a counter suit for divorce against Raymond H. Archibald, 6018 Walnut street.

Archibald, the action set forth, is a member of the Castle Shannon Country Club and Keystone Athletic Club, and district sales agent for the Bell Oil and Gas Company, local sales manager of the Richfield Oil Corporation, and has a similar position with a third oil company.

SUIT NAMES WOMAN

Mrs. Archibald charges cruelty and misconduct, naming Elizabeth Haas. Archibald, when he filed his suit against his wife last October 4, made a charge of misconduct against her, setting the date at December 24, 1927.

They were married May 17, 1927, but have not lived together since last March, Mrs. Archibald's suit declares. She says he gave her $20 a week for support, but reduced it to $15 in September, and since filing suit against her in October has contributed small amounts irregularly.

CHARGES CLOTHES STOLEN

Her husband stole her clothes a dozen times and sold them for money to get liquor, Mrs. Ellen G. Hunihan, 26, of South St. Clair street, testified in her suit for divorce from John F. Hunihan, Harvard street, before Judge Joseph Stadtfield.

She said he had never supported her, and that she had worked during the 10 years they remained together, since their marriage in 1921. Dodging things he threw at her became a habit with her, she said, declaring:

"I ducked candlesticks, dishes and a lamp, but June 11 he beat me with his fists, so I couldn't stand it any more, and left him."

The case will be decided later by the judge.

FAVORED ROUGH TREATMENT

John C. Mosser, 40, of 1405 Sherman avenue, was granted a divorce from Evaline E. Mosser, 24, of Swissvale, by Judge Joseph M. Swearingen. A woman witness for Mosser testified:

"She believed in treating men rough, and said they liked you better if you did."

Mosser testified that his bride—she was 22 when they married—often threw dishes at him when he got home late from work, and once threw a dish so hard it broke two of his ribs. He said she accused him of keeping company with other women. And, he testified, she drank on several occasions. The Mossers were married in 1929 and lived in North Braddock.

Captaincy Proposed For Army Inventor

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Master Sergeant Paul R. Nelson, of the Coast Artillery, who two years ago deeded to the government an invention worth hundreds of thousands of dollars, will retire next June with the rank and pay of a captain if Congress can be induced to act.

Representative Hull, of Wisconsin, with War Department approval, has introduced a bill providing for Nelson's promotion when he retires with 30 years of service to his credit.

Lesson No. 2 of W. Scott Grove's Course in Piano Playing

PIANO LESSONS

Next Sunday, February 8th, the Sun-Telegraph will publish the second lesson of the W. Scott Grove Course in Piano Playing. This course is so simple that any child can, by its aid, be started on the way to proficiency on the piano or organ. The fundamental principles in music must first be mastered . . . that is essential. The Music Simplifier Course in Piano Playing teaches the fundamental principles in the easiest and simplest manner possible. It makes the learning a pleasure study by making it fascinating. You know at all times what you are doing, why you are doing it, and what progress you are making.

The author of the plan believes that any person will reach the point where he can play simple popular music, and if he wants to get beyond that, and in all probability he will, Pittsburgh instruction offers the best possible training.

Each lesson will be printed one time only. Remember there are 24 of them. Lesson 2 Sunday, Feb. 8th. Preceding copies of these lessons can be procured from the Circulation Dept.

WAR LAUNCHED ON OAKLAND HALL SITE

OPPONENTS BITTER

The downtown group has been bitter in its opposition to the Schenley Farms site. They have told commissioners through their counsel, former Mayor William A. Magee, that rather than see the town hall taken out of the downtown triangle, they would prefer to see the project dropped entirely.

Representing many of the large downtown taxpayers, this group has contended from the first that the primary object is to handle conventions and that this may be most easily accomplished near the hotels, railroad stations and department stores.

Others who have been in touch with commissioners in behalf of a downtown site have been A. H. Burchfield, Philip C. Hodill, Leo Lehman and W. J. Strassburger.

The offer of F. F. Nicola, of the Schenley Farms Company, to County Commissioners was to construct a town hall on the Schenley Farms site for $6,000,000. The commissioners have accepted the site, provided it can be obtained for $8 a square foot.

ASSESSED AT $450,610

The assessed valuation of the property is $450,610.

If the law will allow the Schenley Farms Company to build the hall, plans will be prepared under the supervision of County Architect Stanley L. Roush, and bids taken in the usual way.

The Nicola interests had been asking $10 a square foot for the Schenley Farms site, but it is generally believed that the $8 a square foot offered by the commissioners will be acceptable.

Mr. Nicola, asked regarding the price, did not commit himself. He said:

"Leaving price aside, it is my great desire to see this property used to the best interests of all the people of Allegheny County."

Joseph G. Armstrong, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, said:

"What the commissioners have done is now a matter of record. What we will do is in the future. I have nothing to say on the matter now."

SELECTION OPPOSED

James C. Chaplin, president Colonial Trust Company:

"I have nothing to say now. I will have a statement following the meeting of the Downtown Town Hall Association Thursday."

E. C. Eppley, president Eppley Hotels Company:

"I have not had time to study the action taken on the Town Hall site. I have no statement now."

George S. Davison, chairman first Town Hall committee:

"I have nothing to say."

Pressley H. Bailey, past president Building Owners and Managers:

"The site selected for the Town Hall may be worth as much as $8 a square foot today, but six months after the hall is placed there the property will not be worth $2.50 a square foot. It will cut the residential values in that district at least 100 per cent."

F. J. Osterling, North Side architect:

"In my opinion, a majority of the people in the county is disappointed in the selection of the Nicola site. It is clear out of town and far from its sphere of usefulness. The price fixed is much greater than the real value of the property, which is residential and not worth more than $3 a square foot."

BERLIN, Feb. 4.—Under-consumption rather than over-production was blamed for the world-wide trade depression today by Sir Henri Deterding, British oil magnate.

Sir Henri, who is director-general of the Royal Dutch Petroleum Company and a director of Shell Transport and Trading Company, expressed his opinions in an interview with correspondents here. He declared:

"The international depression is not due to over-production, but to too little consumption. In reality, production is normal, but the world is able to consume more goods.

NANCY'S RAJAH WINS SUIT

BOMBAY, Feb. 4.—(INS.)—The high court of Bombay today dismissed a suit for $70,000 damages preferred against the former Maharajah of Indore, one of the wealthiest of Indian potentates, by Mme. Sowkabais, charging him with detaining the singer and her daughter against their will for more than 10 years.

The judge ruled that the acts complained of in the suit were executed by the defendant in the capacity of official ruler of the land, therefore making them "acts of state."

The ex-ruled of the state of Indore, who was forced to abdicate his throne in 1925 after an affair with a dancer, married Nancy Ann Miller, of Seattle, three years ago. The couple and their two children are now living in Paris.

Fund Sought in Job Drive for County's Idle

Casey Company, and Frank J. Chesterman, general manager of the Bell Telephone Company.

INDORSED BY GOVERNOR

The program when completed is expected in informed quarters to constitute a new and effective manner of dealing with the present economic depression, and to provide an example to the rest of the country in stabilization of employment.

The program as initiated comprises several recommendations included in a plan evolved by Mr. Kaufmann and presented to the association for its consideration.

This plan has been submitted to Gov. Pinchot by his unemployment committee, and it is reported from a reliable source he has expressed his hearty indorsement of it. From an equally reliable source it is reported that the plan has been taken to the White House by one of Pennsylvania's senators.

Under the plan of Mr. Kaumann, involuntary unemployed will be listed and classified according to occupation and need, and employment will be financed by the association on projects first, of a public nature, secondly, of a semi-public nature, and, thirdly, of a private or corporate nature. His plan is designed to stimulate undertakings.

As an illustration, he stated that if the city should appropriate $500,000 for repaving work which would involve at least $250,000 for labor, the association would propose that the entire $500,000 be spent for materials and that the labor would be provided and financed by the association. This would double the amount of work. One effect of this plan would be beneficial effect upon taxation in the future.

WOULD DROP DOLE

The plan also comprises immediate assistance to worthy in numerous ways, but eventually to eliminate the dole and the use of city, county and state funds for relief. The administration also would be removed from political interference or pressure.

Mr. Kaufmann, upon inquiry, outlined his recommendations for stabilization as follows:

The unemployed of a community may be roughly divided into two classes, the unemployable and the involuntarily unemployed.

Class A is a group which is with us during normal times, consisting of the mentally and physically unfit, the aged, and other dependents who are taken care of by various agencies which have been organized for that purpose. They are the special wards of the Association for the Improvement of the Poor, the Jewish Family Welfare Association, the Salvation Army—in short the regularly established social agencies.

Class B is a group of able-bodied people who have over a period of years worked in the community in one or more positions and have, morally earned credit standing by their working records, who have been thrown out of work in the present economic situation, who are now in need, and who are ready to serve if work is available.

OPPOSE PUBLIC FUNDS

It is proposed that the relief fund necessary for Class A should be secured in the normal procedure which takes place in normal economic times. If in times of depression Class A is enlarged it is only enlarged due to the fact that we were unable to take care of Class B. In short, Class A should remain normal. Therefore, it becomes the obligation of the community to take care of and solve the problem of Class B so that Class A, the dependent class, is not enlarged. The problem therefore is how to take care of Class B.

It is accepted in this plan that city, county and state governments should not provide funds primarily for relieving unemployment. This situation is primarily the obligation of the industrialists and the commercial organizations, banking institutions and all other employers of labor who originally employed this group known as class B.

It is further submitted that it is socially and economically unwise to attempt to meet the needs of dependent families in Class B solely by means of distribution of relief funds. Such a distribution is a dole, whether the funds be private or public agencies. The effect is the same in either case. The self respect of the recipients is broken down, a premium is put upon malinering, and the inescapable publicity attendant upon the raising and distribution of such a fund tends to attract to the city idle persons from other parts of the country and to increase unduly the spiritual depression of citizens generally.

PROPOSE COUNTY FUND

It is proposed that a fund should be raised in Allegheny County this fund to be administered by a selected group of industrialists, economists, bankers and statisticians, who will organize themselves into an employing agency.

It is further proposed that to raise this fund we should ask all employers of labor to contribute an amount equal to the average day's total payroll in 1929. It is calculated that in this manner more than a million dollars would be realized.

It is further proposed that the unemployed in Allegheny County shall apply for work through this Central Employment Agency. The applicant will apply to various decentralized offices or by mail, secure a form which is to be devised, to take this form to his last employer who will certify his record as an employe, his wage rate, and his record as a desirable citizen. The form will also state the applicant's obligations, such as rent, number of dependents in his family, his credit obligations, and living costs. These will be filed according to trades and rated according to necessity.

The city and county governments who claim they have work to be done in one form or another, but cannot do it due to the lack of funds, will make a formal application to the Central Bureau for certain types of men and the bureau will supply the man or woman power.

Semi-public enterprises such as those sponsored or needed by charitable institutions, libraries, schools, hospitals, churches, playgrounds, etc., may draw the necessary labor next in importance to municipal projects.

WOULD SPEED UP WORK

The 3,000 employers may make formal application for certain types of labor not provided in their 1931 budgets. These requisitions for labor will be given to a separate committee, who will decide the importance of the work that is applied for, rate of pay, and will allot the order in which they should be performed.

In this way city and county work can be put into motion at once as well as industrial improvements, clean-ups, paint-ups and all other forms of work which industry now is not doing because of the economic depression. It will be noted here that industry will in this way, have an opportunity actually to receive a return for their contribution to the solution of the unemployment situation.

This money for man or woman power, being put into circulation automatically will bring about purchase of materials, thus widening the beneficial effect of the plan.

It is further proposed that the employers who provided the initial fund may at some stage in the development of this plan ask full-time employes to join by contributing one day's pay to the fund.

Whether this should be done in the first solicitation or in the second is a matter to be determined. When the employe becomes a contributor to the fund, then the administering body would consist of not only the industrialists, the bankers, the economists and the statisticians, but also representatives of the employes.

SHUNS POLITICS

It would seem that if this plan is sound it would be a substitute for politically controlled and politically administered unemployment insurance. This, however, is a matter for further discussion, sideration and debate.

Not only will this contral bureau supply work but it will organize departments to assist the unemployed applicant to adjust extension of credit, take care of his mortgages, his installments, his bank loans, his food, shelter, heat and light.

This plan is proposed with the intent that it would be administered strictly from the standpoint of economic necessity and need, and be safeguarded against any influence, pressure or interference from political or any other quarters.

The plan of Mr. Kaufmann was submitted to the Allegheny County unemployment committee, of which Mr. Kaufmann is chairman, at its organization meeting in connection with the statewide program of Gov. Pinchot, and the committee pledging its co-operation with the program of the emergency association, adopted this resolution:

"Resolved, That this committee wishes to go on record in expressing its confidence in the soundness of the Edgar J. Kaufmann plan of the emergency association outlined in the above resolution. It believes that, until the aforesaid plan has been given time to prove itself no other independent project should be undertaken nor approved by this committee.

SPPORT URGED

"That this committee believes that full support should be given to the Allegheny County Emergency Association in helping it, in so far as it is possible, to put this proposed plan into full operation.

"That it authorizes the chairman to notify Mr. Braun and each member of the executive committee that it has confidence in the plan and stands ready to serve them in every way possible.

"That the chairman should be authorized to state to the citizens of the Pittsburgh district that as an authorized committee appointed by the Governor it urges all employers and all full-time employes whose average earning power has not been substantially affected since 1929 to contribute forthwith to the fund created under the direction of the Allegheny County Emergency Association and to send their checks to the authorized treasurer, Roy A. Hunt, treasurer, Oliver Building.

"That it is the sense of this committee that two of the most significant aspects of the Edgar J. Kaufmann plan are, first, its avoidance of a type of aid heretofore practiced, and, second, its provision for an opportunity for work of the type to which the worker is adapted and accustomed and at a wage prevailing today in the several crafts.

"That, in view of the fact that the Pittsburgh district is looked upon as the outstanding industrial community in America, the experiment herein proposed will be watched with keen interest not only throughout Pennsylvania, but throughout the nation, with its success likely to prove a most stimulating example."

NEW FORMULA SPEEDS GROWTH

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Feb. 4.—(AP.)—A synthetic substitute for vitamin A, the growth factor, has been found at the University of West Virginia.

The substance is a combination of iodine, fats and iron. There is nothing mysterious about it. Thus far it has been tried only on rats and the results were obtained quite simply by giving them along with meals, ferrous oxide which contains the iodine and iron, and linoleic acid, which has the fats.

In reporting the discovery to the American Association for the advancement of science, Dr. F. E. Chidester refers particularly to the discovery recently by another scientist, Dr. H. M. Evans, of the University of California, that fatty acids from cocoanut oil are beneficial in the deficiency of vitamin B. This is the nerve vitamin.

BAD LUCK STILL DOGS DO-X

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands, Feb. 4.—(INS.)—Continuation of the bad luck which has dogged the DO-X ever since she left Altenrheim, Switzerland, three months ago to attempt a flight across the Atlantic, today held the giant million dollar German flying boat at Gando Bay, near here.

While attempting a takeoff for the Cape Verde Islands in rough seas yesterday morning several braces and supports of the ship were bent and strained. Repair parts will have to be brought from Germany and prospects of a continuation of the flight before March are remote.

So many and varied have been the mishaps to the DO-X that she is considered a jinx ship.

QUIZ POLICE IN MAN'S DEATH

An open hearing on the death of John Golab, 65, of 268 Fifty-eighth street, who died in St. Francis Hospital of shock and hemorrhages, after being locked in Forty-third Police Station, was ordered today by Coroner William A. McGregor.

Arrested on a charge of drunkenness, Golab was locked in a cell late Saturday evening. Found lying on the floor in a semi-unconscious condition early Sunday morning, he was removed to the St. Francis Hospital, where he died.

Blood tests made by the Bureau of Mines revealed no traces of alcohol. An investigation at the morgue attributed death to shock and hemorrhages.

HELD IN KILLING EX-POLICEMAN

Joseph Soldan, 36, 609 Enlin street, was recommended held to the grand jury on a murder charge by a coroner's jury today in connection with the fatal shooting of Mylas Rooney, 37, of 1307 Boyle street, a former city patrolman, on January 19.

According to the testimony given at the hearing by eyewitnesses of the shooting, Rooney was shot by Soldan during an altercation. Soldan claimed to have acted in self-defense, saying Rooney insulted him and then reached as though for a gun.

Soldan fled following the shooting and was arrested a short time later.

And these frocks of scarf-print silks do the trick by using rather wide borders to finish the bottoms of skirts and blouses, and narrow borders in amusing ways on wide revers collars and sleeves.

ALMA RUBENS BECAME DESPONDENT OVER FAILURES

MAKE-BELIEVE BROUGHT ON TROUBLE

By ALMA RUBENS

CHAPTER V.

Just about this time there fell into my hands De Quincey's "Confessions of an Opium Eater," and Bram Stoker's "Dracula," books which aroused my fanciful interest through their dramatic picturization of the unreal—but which, compared to my own experiences after I had become a drug addict—were not beyond my ken.

Miss Rubens.

Even then, governed as I was by that almost uncontrollable impulse to do the forbidden, the bizarre, the unusual, I could mentally transport myself into the character of a dope fiend, a huge vampire bat, and as such, in my imagination, I could flit hither and yon, making my deathly visitations at will, just for the sheer thrill of feeling my own power.

Is it any wonder then, with this distorted viewpoint, that I lost every job in quick succession, either because of rank incompetence, or because my mooning and posing inevitably aroused the baser sex appetite of my male employers?

I shall never forget my first brief experience as a central telephone operator, when, in fits of abstraction, I returned so many nickels to customers after they had obtained service in booths in my territory that I was fired.

And, there was my meteoric experience at the ribbon counter in the Emporium, San Francisco's biggest department store. I thought I was getting along fine, until, suddenly, without warning, the floorwalker, accompanied by one of the proprietors, called me before a group of fellow-employes for a measurement demonstration.

Ribbons and Figures

Now, arithmetic and its various equations were then, and still are, my chief stumbling blocks. Figures mean no more to me than the wriggly hieroglific on an Egyptian tomb. Struggle as I would with them, I was always wrong.

So, when my bosses came around I was in a quandary, but I put on a brave front.

"Alma," began the chief floorwalker, "when a customer asks for three and seven-eighths yards of blue ribbon, what do you do?"

"Why, naturally," I responded, all at sea, "I measure three and seven-eighths yards and wrap it up for her."

"All right," he directed, "show Mr. Hendricks here how you do it, I am your customer. Measure me three and seven-eighths yards of this," and he handed me a bulky bolt.

Airily, as though my fingers were skimming along the keyboard of a piano, I obeyed. I didn't know what I was doing, but I was doing it with great vim and vigor. Before I could complete the operation, however, the proprietor halted me with such a cry of human agony as I hope never to hear again.

"My God, John!" he groaned. 'Did you see that? Did you see how she measured that? Oh, my God! No wonder we are on the verge of bankruptcy.'

He turned to the other witnesses, which by this time included several other officials of the concern, and declared:

"Gentlemen, the mystery is solved. No one is stealing our ribbon. It's Alma. She's measuring ribbon by the oodle, instead of by the yard. I don't believe she even knows what a yard is. She probably thinks it's the place where they keep the dog penned up."

He glared at me. I stood, petrified with horror.

"Good heavens, girl! No wonder customers ask for you!"

And, that was that. I was fired again.

Bargain Counter

The only job I ever voluntarily quit was at a bargain shirtwaist counter, where I was paid a few cents commission on every sale. The competition was so keen that after a nerve-racking, body-bruising throat-husking day, I earned but fifty cents, which I spent for ointment and a gargle.

Once I ran away from a job and once I was discharged because they accused me of deserting my post. The former was in a telegraph office where I was employed to fold and seal telegrams in envelopes.

My duties in the telegraph office took me to a distant section of the city at 5 o'clock in the morning, riding on the street cars among the rough element usually employed at the wharves and on construction jobs. These men never molested me.

But one raw morning I arrived at the office a little ahead of time. It was just breaking dawn. I thought I was alone in the back office when suddenly one of the male employes appeared, locking the door behind him and sidling toward me in a crawfishy manner of ominous import.

I was terrorized even before he reached out for me. Never will I forget what ensued. His fingers were long and claw-like. His face was set in a leer. He had several teeth missing in front, and the general ensemble sugested one of those moving picture Chinese monsters who used to pursue Pearl White and Juanita Hanson in the movie thrillers of long ago.

He tried to kiss me. I ducked under the table and leaped to my feet on the other side. He tried to run around and catch me, but I eluded him by dashing to the opposite side. I endeavored to keep the table between us, but he upset it and darted after me. I again eluded him by throwing a chair in his path.

Escaped by Window

My job in the telegraph office was over, too—because of a man. He had waylaid me in the office before the others came to work, and clutched at me, like a gorilla in the movies. It was a terrible struggle. Tables and chairs overturned. At last I tripped over the filing cabinet, and as it fell a corner of it struck him on the foot.

Before he could recover I threw open the window and made my exit, never to return. Even after I got outside, with men passing on their way to work, I was scared, too scared to scream.

The other job, where I was fired for deserting, led me into a still more horrible experience.

Once again I had obtained a foothold with the telephone company. During my rest period, a girl friend, whom I had never dreamed was a married woman, received an urgent telephone call, requesting her to come to her home immediately. They didn't tell her what the trouble was and she was badly frightened. She begged me to accompany her, and I did so, out of sheer sympathy, seeing that she was so strangely perturbed.

The first thing we saw when we stepped into the cheaply furnished two-room apartment was a dead man, stretched out at full length on the floor.

It was her husband. They had quarreled that morning and he had taken poison.

This shock so completely unnerved me that it was several hours before I could get myself together sufficiently to return to my switchboard. When I did return, the chief operator curtly informed me that I was no longer employed there.

And, there I was, jobless again, as usual.

Alma once more is out of work. Convinced of her failure in business, what will be her next step? Tomorrow tells of her first appeal to the movies.

to you on the condition that Dorothy get a little something, about $50 a week.'

"Then Alex said, 'Nellie (he usually called her Nellie)—I will leave Dorothy half of my estate.'

"Lillian told him she would work and help him all she could and that if she died first he should leave half of his estate to Dorothy."

Miss Clayton testified that Miss Russell was earning from $1,700 to $2,000 a week with Weber and Fields' show at that time.

Miss Russell and Moore were married June 12, the same day the show ended its road tour in Pittsburgh. That same night Moore left to join Theodore Roosevelt, who was campaigning for the nomination for the presidency, Miss Clayton testified.

TELLS OF PROMISE

Soon after Miss Russell died June 6, 1922, Miss Clayton testified, she was here playing at the Davis Theater. Moore came to see her, she said. She asked how Dorothy was. Moore, she testified, replied:

"'She is fine. You know I will always take care of Dot.'"

On cross-examination the witness was asked how many times Miss Russell had been married before she married Moore.

She replied:

"She had two husbands, a Mr. Solomon and Perugini."

Dorothy, she said, was the daughter of Solomon, now dead, and Miss Russell.

Mrs. Ruth Barcher, of New York, formerly of Pittsburgh, testified that in 1927, while she and Dorothy were with Ambassador Moore in his Rolls Royce in New York, he mentioned promising to leave part of his money to Dorothy.

GAVE MOORE PROFITS

Bert Cooper, New York theatrical booking agent, testified to managing Miss Russell's beauty lectures after her marriage and turning over the profits to Moore.

Judge T. B. Trimble refused an offer by the plaintiff to present in evidence six articles written by Mrs. Calvit in a magazine purporting to establish a motive for Moore cutting her off in his will. The court took under advisement offers to present evidence showing Miss Russell had paid large sums to her husband through New York and Pittsburgh banks and depositions for the purpose of substantiating Mrs. Calvit's claims.

STUDY VENDOR REGISTRATION

Conditional affirmation of the new ordinance providing for registration of out-of-town merchants and vendors with the Department of Public Safety, pending approval by the city law department, has been given by the councilmanic Public Safety Committee.

The ordinance stipulates a fine of $50 or 30 days in jail for failure to comply with the registration feature.

Opinion of the law department whether the ordinance can be enforced, and information as to whether similar legislation is in effect in other cities, is requested by Council, pending final action.

TRAFFIC TURN BAN EXTENDED

Two left and one right turns are requested barred in a proposed ordinance and a 60-day trial provision sent to Public Safety Director James M. Clark by the Better Traffic Committee yesterday.

The proposed ordinance provides the continuance of 24-hour bans of the following turns: Left-turn of southbound traffic on North Highland onto Kirkpatrick, and the right-turn from eastbound traffic on Water street into the Wood street entrance to the Monongahela parking wharf.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Feb. 4.—(AP.)—The flight of the U. S. Navy dirigible Los Angeles to the Southland was unexpectedly put off at 11 o'clock last night, an hour before its scheduled time of departure.

Officers at the airfield gave no explanation of the change in plans. An aerological report issued a short time earlier had forecast good flying conditions at the airport and over much of the projected course.

WARNING

A Vicious Deception May Be Attempted Against You

When You Ask for Genuine Bayer Aspirin at a Store, Scrutinize the Box Carefully . . . The Well-Being of Yourself and Yours is at stake

THIS warning is published to combat a vicious deception that may be attempted against those who seek Genuine Bayer Aspirin for pain in this district.

We publish it as a duty to ourselves and to you. To protect the well-being of your family and yourself from its possibly cruel results.

Unscrupulous or ignorant persons, we are told, are offering the public preparations of questionable origin—masquerading in packages purely imitative of Bayer Aspirin packages—as being "the same as Bayer Aspirin" or "like Bayer Aspirin" or as giving "the same results as Bayer Aspirin."

Watch Out and Take Care. Only genuine Bayer Aspirin can rightfully claim Bayer Aspirin results. Only Bayer Aspirin can fairly claim Bayer Aspirin's SAFETY to the heart. For only the makers of Bayer Aspirin know the laboratory tests it embodies.

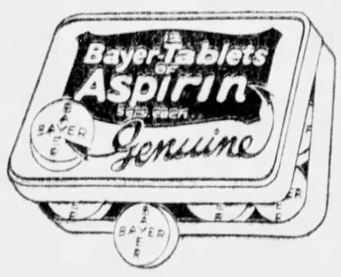
Some of these imitations are patently spurious. Some may be vicious in their effects. One that we found in Brooklyn contained 50% of plain Talcum Powder! The maker of this spurious aspirin was sentenced to 3 years imprisonment by the New York Courts. The well-being of yourself and yours is at stake.

Remember that years ago doctors widely warned the public against "headache remedies" as dangerous to the heart. As heart depressants that were unsafe to take.

Then remember how genuine Bayer Aspirin came. And was acclaimed the world over by leading men of science as SAFE relief for pain; and prescribed without hesitancy by eminent physicians as relief that did not harm the heart. That did not cause heart depression. That acted with amazing rapidity, yet left no bad "after-effects."

What folly, in light of those things then, to dose yourself with drugs of which you know nothing. Drugs often made primarily to sell at shoddy prices. Made to imitate. Made sometimes solely to deceive. Don't gamble—KNOW. The health of yourself and those near to you is too precious for experiment.

Remember those things. Then when you ask for genuine Bayer Aspirin, see that you get it. Don't be misled for another's profit. Do that, if you must, only with preparations you use externally and not with those you take internally. Only Genuine Bayer Aspirin gives Bayer Aspirin results. Every box of Bayer Aspirin has the cross shown below—so has every tablet. Hence it's easy to identify. Watch out and take care. Our interest in this does not matter. But yours does.



Does Not Harm The Heart

SHOOTS BRIDE, KILLS NEW MATE

SALAMANCA, N. Y., Feb. 4.—(AP)—The honeymoon of less than a week of Wesley Dieter, 42, and Mrs. Vivian King Dieter, 30, was brought to a tragic end in a farmhouse near here last night.

A charge of buckshot, fired through a window while the bride was sitting on the knee of her husband, wounded her critically, and another charge fired at close range as Dieter rushed to the porch killed him.

Sheriff Frank A. Annis and a hastily formed posse stalked the woods in the snow and early this morning came upon Darwin King, 35, former husband of Mrs. Dieter, hiding in an abandoned barn.

Annis said King readily admitted that he had done the shooting and had hidden the gun.

Mrs. Dieter obtained a divorce from King nine months ago and was married to Dieter last Thursday. The couple then went to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Wilber, to spend their honeymoon. A small boy by Mrs. Dieter's marriage to King was being cared for by the Wilbers.

KING AWARDS ISLE TO FRANCE

PARIS, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—After 22 years, the King of Italy, Victor Emanuel, agreed upon by France and Mexico as an arbiter to determine ownership of tiny, desolate Clipperton Rock, Pacific ocean island, has found against Mexico and awarded the island to France.

His decision, filed yesterday at the Quai d'Orsay, rules that the Mexican government, which has kept a garrison of men there since 1897, must quit the island and surrender sovereignty to the French government.

The island was annexed by France in 1857. A party of Americans later installed themselves but upon representations by France Washington recognized French sovereignty in 1897. In that same year Mexico, governed by Porfirio Diaz, claimed and seized the island. In 1908 Diaz agreed to submit the ownership of the tiny plot to the arbitration of the King of Italy and abide his decision.

WICKERSHAM QUIZ RESUMES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Torn by its controversy over prohibition, the Law Enforcement Commission assembled today to continue surveying the whole field of crime.

Immediately before the members were two virtually completed reports, one dealing with crimnial statistics and the other with the prosecution of crime. Unless disagreements develop over the material or form of these surveys it was held possible both might be in President Hoover's hands before the end of the month.

However, the work is to be conducted at a more leisurely pace than characterized the last part of the commission's prohibition deliberations. Under present plans an adjournment will be called the latter part of the week until March 4.

Chicago Grand Jury Rejects Graft Story

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—The special grand jury has dismissed the recent testimony of Albert R. Brunker, chairman of the Civic Safety Committee, as "hearsay, general in character," and as evidence "incompetent" to its investigation of police affairs.

The grand jury called Brunker after Boston newspapers quoted him as making public charges that "Al Capone has 6,000 officials on his payroll," that "80 per cent of Chicago judges are criminals," and that police were covering up the slayers of Alfred Lingle and seven Moran gangsters.

COUNCIL SPEEDS POLICE RADIO STATION

Final Action on Broadcast Equipment Due Monday; Committee Gives Approval

Legislation providing for purchase and installation of a police alarm radio broadcasting station at the Mt. Washington Police Station was approved by the Finance Committee of Council yesterday. A contract ordinance, introduced Monday, providing advertising for bids on the equipment, was passed and referred to committee. Final action will be taken next Monday after which Bertram L. Succop director of the Bureau of Supplies will advertise.

Estimated cost of the equipment and installation, along with 30 receiving sets to be placed in automobile to be purchased for the Bureau of Police, is set at $17,500.

Money for the radio equipment was provided in the 1931 budget last month after an outbreak of bank holdups here. Public Safety Director James M. Clark recommendated to Council that radio should be used in hunting down criminals.

Tests were made by engineers of the Radio Corporation of America as to the best location for the new station. The Mt. Washington site at Virginia avenue and Shiloh street, was decided upon.

DRIVER GIVEN 2 TO 5 YEARS

Arraigned before Judge George V. Moore late yesterday on a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated and larceny of an automobile after having served sentences on such charges Michael McDonough, 30, of Second street, Rankin, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to the workhouse for from two to five years.

Rankin police said they arrested him on the Rankin Junction Bridge ramp after he had wrecked a machine stolen from Albert Kubanis, of Rankin. McDonough pleaded for mercy on the grounds that his conduct was above reproach when he was not drinking.

CITY PROMISES STREET QUIZ

Property owners on Murdoch and Covode streets protested improvement of the thoroughfares on the ground that such action was not necessary at this time, will be given a hearing soon, it has been decided by City Council.

The petition, presented to the city fathers Monday, asserted that Murdoch street, which is scheduled to be improved, between Covode and Beacon streets, is in good shape now. Assessments for the work would be charged against the property owners. Council has not set a date for the public hearing.

DRUG CLERK IS KONJOLA "FAN"

Young Lady Found New and Different Medicine Exactly What She Needed.

A medicine must have merit when seven million bottles of it have been used in two years. Well, that is the astounding record that Konjola has made.

MISS JESSIE WERREN

Konjola—all of its 32 ingredients working together—goes to the very source of ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. Take, for instance, the happy surprise that Konjola gave Miss Jessie Werren, 146 Charles street, Pittsburgh. Think over her words and then ask your druggist about Konjola. He knows what this remarkable medicine has actually done and is glad to recommend it. But first now read the statement of Miss Werren.

"So many people asked for Konjola in the drug store where I am employed and so many of them told what it had done for them, that I decided to put it to the test. Whatever I ate disagreed with me. I had headaches and was losing weight. One bottle helped me so much that I am going right ahead. Already I am eating and sleeping fine and my mother notices how much better I am looking. Oh, my, Konjola does work wonders, but it is best to take from six to eight bottles."

RED CROSS SUM HERE NEARS $200,000

Two-thirds of Local Quota Subscribed; Payne Issues Relief Bill Statement

Pittsburgh's contributions to the Red Cross $10,000,000 national drouth relief fund neared $200,000 today. With a total of $199,534.45 reported, two-thirds of the local quota of $300,000 has been subscribed.

Washington reports are that $5,069,000, a little more than half the national quota, has been raised.

"In August the Red Cross assumed responsibility for drouth relief and has extended relief to the drouth sufferers in the 21 states affected. The twenty-five million bill under discussion is a general relief bill, and not a drouth relief bill. . . . It would require the Red Cross to expend this money everywhere in the United States, wherever needed, for unemployment in the cities, in the drouth area, and anything else.

"Unemployment relief is being given by splendid relief agencies throughout the country. For the Red Cross to undertake the administration of this bill would seriously embarrass all these agencies and require the setting up of organizations by the Red Cross, duplicating the agencies now operating. It could not turn over a dollar of the money to other agencies, because, by the terms of the bill, the money must be expended by the Red Cross."

Payne asserted the sum appropriated by this bill ($25,000,000) was "hopelessly inadequate."

GROCERS OFFER PRIZES

George Arliss on Film Set Refuses to Appear With Scantily Clad Girls

By HARRISON CARROLL.

(Copyright, 1931, by Press Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 4.

Refusal of George Arliss to appear in a scene with 24 scantily attired bathing girls led to a minor crisis this week in the filming of the veteran English actor's newest talkie, "The Ruling Passion."

Hollywood's latest tempest in a teapot took place at a fashionable Pasadena home, where a Warner Brothers company was on location filming a smart afternoon garden party.

In the absence of a swimming pool, the 24 girls, clad in brief bathing suits, were draped around a lily pond.

George Arliss

As soon as Arliss sighted them he took exception to Director John Adolphi's idea of production value. In his quiet, polite way, he told Adolphi that "The Ruling Passion" was no Mack Sennett comedy.

Furthermore, he had his own way. Assistants hurriedly rounded up drapes for the girls, and they were placed inconspicuously among the more formally attired extras.

Harmony was then restored.

HUSH MONEY

A Paramount location company, filming scenes for "Skippy," ran into an unusual complication this week. The cameras and microphone were set up in a tumbledown Mexican settlement near San Bernardino when the raucous tones of a cheap radio suddenly assailed the ear. An assistant director was dispatched to stop the noise. Presently, he came back, scratching his head. A canny Mexican woman demanded money to turn off the instrument. In the end, the director had to promise her a check.

IRENE DUNN'S ASSIGNMENT

This actress came to Hollywood from Broadway's "Showboat" company.

Colleen Moore

Colleen Moore's diamond bracelet was returned this week to the Hollywood Theater, where the star lost it at a recent premiere. A colored woman collected the $200 reward. . . . John Barrymore is due back at work today after his latest relapse with jungle fever. . . . Fifi Dorsay is very penitent about her European trip hoax. Members of the Fox publicity department have been invited out to dinner. . . . Hollywood.

Carnegie Tech Club Arranges Smoker

A smoker and bridge party will be given by the Carnegie Tech Club, Carnegie Institute of Technology, at the club rooms, 421 Fifth avenue, Saturday afternoon, February 7. Faculty and trustees of the institution are expected to attend.

What's This All About?

"What's this?" demands C. Aubrey Smith in this scene, with Ralph Forbes, Halliwell Hobbs, Marion Davies, Ray Milland and Nena Quartoar, from "The Bachelor Father." It is a Cosmopolitan picture, based on the Belasco stage success, and is serving as Miss Davies' latest starring vehicle. Robert Z. Leonard directed the production. It will be seen here soon.

NOTES ABOUT DRAMAS COMING NEXT WEEK

Charlotte Andrews, to whom is allotted an important part in "Death Takes a Holiday," in which Philip Merivale will star in the Alvin for one week, commencing Monday, is decidedly versatile, it is said. Following her graduation from Northwestern University, Miss Andrews was a dancer for several seasons with the Ravinia Opera Company of Chicago, and being a trained musician, she has appeared as piano soloist with the Damrosch orchestra. However acting is her metier, and her rise to prominence on the Broadway stage has been rapid.

Seats go on sale at the Nixon box office tomorrow morning for the appearances of Otis Skinner in "Marius." This romantic drama of water front life in the French city of Marseilles will begin Monday night.

"The Alarm Clock," the comedy with which George Sharp will bring his engagement in the Pitt to a close next week, is the story of a family that moves to the city after having lived in a little country town. Instead of being intimidated by the bright lights, they take to them like the proverbial duck to water, with hilarious results.

Comedienne

Officials Invited To See 'Cimarron'

"Cimarron," film of Edna Ferber's novel, will open in the Warner Sunday, February 8, at midnight. All city and county officials have been invited. Grant Withers, Nick Lucas and Fred Lightner, brother of Winnie Lightner, screen comedienne, will broadcast from the lobby. Richard Dix, star of the picture, who attended the "Cimarron" premiere last week in New York, has been invited.

Walter Winchell on Broadway

(Copyright 1931, Daily Mirror, Inc.)

Vaude-Villians

They stand nearby the Palace day on day,
And talk in low and falsely hopeful tones.
Their snappy clothes, pathetically gay,
Bespeak ability to wheedle loans;
They swap their gags like children swapping toys,
And rip their lucky brothers into bits;
Their food and drink is Broadway's blatant noise—
Their Bible is Variety or Zit's.

So, hand to mouth, the weeks go swiftly by,
While faded clippings yellow in their hands;
They hum the current hit and watch it die—
And, penniless, they quote their rash demands.

Ah, you, who stand there seven days in seven,
God grant you make the two-a-day in Heaven!
—Don Wahn.

Gag

Harry Richman tells of the riveter who was laboring on the seventieth story of a new sky-scraper, when a plane began toying with the clouds nearby. Suddenly a parachute-jumper leaped from it. As the para-chuter neared the riveter, the latter was so spellbound he lost his balance and fell.

About the twenty-sixth story the riveter passed the man with the parachute and yowled:

"Aw—move over—you hog."

A Form of Criticism

He was so hammy, says M. Gendel, he couldn't even hold a Times Square theater mob jammed in traffic.

Observation

The Wickersham telephone ex-change district is in the East Fifties—a district noted for the greatest number of speak easies.

And that the recent million-dollar fire at the Lincoln Square Theater, here (which signalled the first "9-9" alarm in over 20 years), destroyed everything in the theater block except a bar-room. The bar still is intact, with glassware, etc., proving that even fire ignores prohibition.

Pardon His Damp Hand

She is one of the Coward-McCann book publishing staff and she gets in their hair by contin-uously complaining about the amount of work she does. The other day she ankled into Mr. Coward's office and sighed:

"Oh, deah, oh deah, I worked so hard last night, I'm actually seeing you double!"

"That," acidly replied Mr. Coward, "is to your advantage."

Another Version of It

The "fly-in-the-coffee" gag has been revised by the Britons in this manner:

"Is there something wrong, sir?" asked the waitress.

"Yeah," growled the customer, "Look at this fly in my cup. What does this mean?"

"Sorry," snapped the gal as she turned away, "I'm a wait-ress, not a fortune teller!"

Unrepentance

Tomorrow I'll call myself a fool
When I look back upon
Today and count the witless things
I'll wish I hadn't done.

But, oh, until tomorrow comes
How sweet it is instead
To love with all my silly heart
And not to use my head!
—Selma Robinson.

Rib-Tickler

Take it from one of The New Yorkers, Phil Baker, the come-dian, who uses a stooge in a box seat for greater laugh wal-lops, thought up a clever stunt which, however, he never had the opportunity to use. The idea was that Baker would say some-thing about honesty, and then declare that all a man had to do was ask a straight question and he would be answered truthfully.

"I'll prove it," Baker was to say, "If the man who killed Lin-gle is in the house, will he stand up?"

At this his confederate in the upper box was to rise. "Did you kill Lingle?" Baker was then to say, and the assistant was to re-tort: "Oh, no, I thought you said 'Lincoln'."

Baker had a high opinion of this bit, but the day before it was to be inserted in the act the box-seater balked.

"Suppose," he objected, "some-body was to take a shot at me before I could say 'Lincoln'?"

The Native New Yorker

The native New Yorker, says Benny Holzman, gets up at the alarm of a Connecticut clock, buttons his Chicago suspenders to Rochester pants, puts on a pair of shoes made in Massa-chusetts, washes in a Pitts-burgh basin, using Cincinnati soap, sits down to breakfast at a Grand Rapids table, eats hot biscuits made with Minneapolis flour, some Kansas City bacon cooked on a St. Louis stove, claps on a hat made in Danbury and rushes for his Detroit motor car.

At night he dives into some night club and indulges in some Montreal wet wash—the only home product in town!

Character

Then there's the racketeer who has a branch warehouse (for his hooch) in the Times Square sector. In the same building is a night club, one of his best customers.

The gay place buys its "wine" from him at $7 a quart. Almost nightly the racketeer patronizes the night club to buy the same laughing soup for his friends, paying $20 a quart for it!

O, Mr. Wilstach!

Suggested for F. J. Wilstach's book of best similes: Sydney Munden's: As great a bore as the man for whom even the grave yawns. Kasper Mona-han's: About as naughty as a trip to the museum. Nina Wilcox Putnam's: College does to girls what brandy does to hard sauce: it spoils the taste without adding a kick . . . Stro-ther F. Cabelle's: The husband of a celebrity is about as well known as the second verse of a popular song.

Just for the Records

Some of the New York papers now feature different versions of Al Capone's career. One of the writers points out that the Gang King pronounces his name Ca-pone (pone to rhyme with Cohen).

This, obviously, is a mistake, considering that all Italian names end in a vowl—e-a-i-o-u. In fewer words, when we met him at Miami recently and asked how he pronounced it, he replied: "Can-po-knee."

He added, however, that so many people called him "Ca-pone" that to be obliging he called himself that now and then so that they wouldn't be embarrassed.

As a matter of fact his name was once spelled C-a-p-o-n-i.

Huh-Uh

One of the New York com-mentators reports among other things: "Another reason why David Belasco's stars are the greatest box office attractions is that he never permits them to appear at benefit performances. This is a sound idea, consider-ing that New York offers count-less benefit shows at which practically the same players are seen."

Very interesting and all that sorta thing. Will Rogers and Eddie Cantor, however, are two of the greatest box office at-tractions in the world—and this, in spite of the fact that Rogers and Cantor hold the record for appearing at more benefit shows than any other stars.

Chapin Divorce Case Settled After Parley

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Di-vorce proceedings of Myrtle Mc-Laughlin Chapin against Huntley Chapin ended suddenly after a conference between attorneys. Chapin, who inherited the income of a million dollar trust fund from his grandfather, Charles R. Hunt-ley, Buffalo utilities operator, must make a $13,000 cash settle-ment and pay $200 monthly for support of their 18-month-old son, Huntley, Jr. Mrs. Chapin is from Atlanta, Ga.

Winter Epidemics

Many Thousands Stricken in Europe and Japan. Now in Eastern United States

If you have a cold knock it out at once. If not then use every pro-tection against colds. They are dangerous.

Each little cold you have leaves a few germs in your system. You may not be aware of it and then are an easy victum of even the mildest epidemics that occur dur-ing the winter months.

Millions are now using the fa-mous Pure Herb Laxative Tonic called Bulgarian Herb (Blood) Tea to break up colds quickly and strengthen and fortify the system. The rich juices brewed from these barks, roots, leaves and plants, taken steaming hot at bedtime, are instantly effective.

Prevention leaves no regrets and Bulgarian Herb Tea taken by the whole family at least twice a week will keep you in good physi-cal condition. The cost is small and your druggist will honestly recommend Bulgarian Herb Tea.

COUGHING IS TABOO ON THE AIR!

Rolf Alexis Sanderson

RADIO people can't afford to cough. "I should feel disgraced if I coughed while on the air," Rolf Sanderson, WGBS program director and singer says. And Barbara Maurel, contralto with the Columbia Broadcasting System, declares, "Many of us have learned to rely on the quick relief Pertussin gives."

Barbara Maurel

Broadcasting studios use Pertussin because it relieves coughs quickly and clears the air passages. Doctors have prescribed it for years—for both young and old.

"We always keep this quick remedy right beside the microphone" says George Beuchler, Station WABC Columbia Broadcasting System. Why don't you try the remedy radio people rely on? This is coughing weather. Watch out! Get Pertussin. Every druggist has it.

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

SEND UP a cheer the Dutch Minstrels are coming back!

Al Bernard and the boys have finally decided to do another program—this time for the Columbia Broadcasting System as announced exclusively yesterday in "We Now Present."

WJAS is the Pittsburgh station and Friday night, February 27, at 8:30 is the time.

Tampa the Magician who—believe it or not—was an end man before he mastered the fine art of pulling rabbits from hats, tells inside secrets of "Minstrel Days" on WCAE at 8 o'clock tonight.

KDKA picked up HVJ, the Pope's individual station at Rome, shortly before noon today in a test program. Another test is to be conducted tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. The Pope is to officially open the station on February 12. His talk will be heard in Pittsburgh about noon on KDKA, WCAE, WJAS.

"CHILLY" DOYLE says Luke Barnett's description of a Polander seeing his first game at Forbes Field is a home run. We'll be in the bleachers at 7:30 when Luke tells the story on WJAS.

VETS' HOSPITAL FUNDS URGED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Veterans Administrator Hines recommended a $10,000,000 hospital program today to a House veterans sub-committee for "immediate consideration." He said future needs of non-service connected cases were the basis of his recommendation.

Figures estimating approximately 129,859 World War veterans would need hospitalization in 1950 were submitted.

DRIVER ON TRIAL FOR DEATHS

Tim Kelleher, 31, of 731 Sarah street, a truck driver employed on the Allegheny River boulevard, went on trial today on two charges of manslaughter in the death of two men and the injuring of 16 others when his truck upset in Lincoln avenue extension last October.

Kelleher, en route to work, loaded his truck with 18 fellow workman. The truck swerved and upset, killing James Geriano, 45, of Kelly street, and Thomas J. Bingham, 33, of 5563 Columbo street.

Three Eagle Lodges Under Rum Charges

Edward Veit is co-defendant with the Erie lodge. Orders were issued by Judge R. M. Gibson on petition of District Attorney Louis E. Graham.

The LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—While the microphones continue to present the leading tillers of the Hollywood fields, only three of radio's stars have, in return, invaded Hollywood.

Among the hosts of the air, only Amos 'n' Andy and Rudy Valee have transferred part of their entertainment activities to the screen. Valee's success as the foremost of radio's troubadours was wholly responsible for his summons to Hollywood. He made one picture and hurried back to the welcoming shelter of the broadcast studios.

The picture future of Amos 'n' Andy is in the laps of the movie gods, but the astrologers of Broadway predict that more talkies must be forthcoming from them, pictures that will give them wider opportunities for their characterizations of bewildered Harlem oafs than their present vehicle, "Check and Double Check."

The Hollywood parade to radio began to form soon after Gloria Swanson lifted her voice to America from London. Today it includes nearly every star on the West Coast with the exception of Chaplin. The broadcasters have made no concentrated effort, it is said, to lead Chaplin to the microphone. It seems to me they might begin right now. Chaplin, airing the personality and the nonsense that make him not only the world's supreme clown but the most popular impromptu entertainer in the stillness of the Hollywood night, would give to radio a new and spectacular appeal.

La Swanson, it will be recalled, set out on the radio s a in a novel manner. No mere obscure plunge, sponsored by some local station, would do. She would—and did—brave the Trans-Atlantic air wave. Hers was the first American voice to be heard from London. It was a striking piece of publicity and American showmanship. Broadcasting is government-owned in Britain. And being government-owned and operated, it absolutely and resolutely forbids any commercial aspect to its program. The British broadcasters evidently had not had any experience with American screen stars, particularly American screen stars of the magnitude of Gloria.

The records show they gave her enthusiastic welcome. What if the London premiere of her latest picture was timed to coincide with her international radio debut? What mattered it even if American radio rajahs had been carrying on negotiations with British broadcasting officials that the ears of the republic might hear the voices of England's great.

England's great could wait. Some day King George and the Prince of Wales and Ramsay MacDonald and Shaw and Kipling and Sir Oliver Lodge and Lady Astor might speak to us, but that day was not at hand. Not while Gloria Swanson was in London and was ready to sing a song.

There is no sign at present of a halt in the click of the castanets. Dancers are tying on the red and black sashes, musicians are adding Cuban instruments to their bands. Musically, we are to go Spanish and like it. Lopez has four Cuban instruments to aid his interpretation of "Peanut Vendor"—such things as the maracas, known here as a "shaker" and bongo, which local musicians call "the little tom tom."

Make system alkaline to ... Stop Colds QUICK!

Get Rid of Colds Before They Weaken You, Make You Liable to More Serious Troubles.

Nowadays it's important to stop your cold quick before it weakens your resistance to more serious trouble.

Any of the older treatments will bring relief—after a time. But thousands say this new way is the quickest of any.

Begin when you feel a cold coming. Take a tablespoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water, morning, noon, and night, the first day. Do same the second day. Then only at night. Colds reduce the alkaline balance of your system. That makes you feel achy, feverish, weak. Phillips Milk of Magnesia relieves this, and restores the alkaline balance.

Doctors prescribe Phillips Milk of Magnesia; hospitals use it. Millions know how it relieves sour stomachs, gas, indigestion, constipation and other symptoms of too much acid. Get the genuine.

STATE HOSPITAL SOUGHT BY PITT

HARRISBURG, Feb. 4.—The University of Pittsburgh yesterday offered the state, through Dr. Alexander H. Colwell, president of the Allegheny County Medical Society and the Public Charities Association, the ground for a proposed psychiatric hospital, to be built in connection with the medical center.

Dr. Colwell, in asking that the project be approved, said the university also offered laboratory and other incidental service for such a project, and in return requests that its students be allowed to have training there.

A total of $10,000,000 for mental work was asked of the state so that a 4,000-bed increase can relieve the pressure and care for the waiting list of mental defectives, and likewise segregate the varied types so that at least a doubling of cures could be made.

Auto Casualties Exceed Those Of World War

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—(INS.)—The automobile killed more Americans in the past 18 months than the World War did in the same length of time.

Those killed in auto accidents totaled 50,900 over the 18 months' period compared to 50,510 members of the A. E. F. killed in action and died of wounds, according to a survey by the Travelers' Insurance Company made public today.

The toll for 1930 from auto accidents amounted to 32,500 killed and 960,000 persons injured. In 1929, 31,215 persons were killed. Automobile deaths in the United States for the past 15 years totaled 282,799. Deaths in 1930 were 298 per cent greater than they were in 1916.

4 SAFES RIFLED IN DOWNTOWN STORE

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

When Mayor Kline said the other day that what the people want is a 16-ounce glass of good 5-cent beer more than one native of old Dutchtown on the North Side recalled the days when the people had just that. Dutchtown once upon a time was dotted with the club rooms of singing societies which were centers of gay times.

Mr. Pfarr

Sunday was the big day for the singing societies. Respectable Germans would take their wives and youngsters to the club rooms and, while the women made talk of this and that, the father immediately repaired to the beer garden. Here with his comrades he sat and played an old German card game (skat) and drank beer. Every so often somebody would lead an impromptu German folksong and before the chorus had been reached 100 voices were resounding over the foaming schooners of beer. This was the schedule from 9 in the morning to 9 at night, and in between the ladies would serve a dinner that tended to increase the girth of bay-windows of their menfolk.

C. A. Eckert, now a full-grown insurance man, then just a child, remembers how his father would take him by the hand each Sunday morning and guide him to the singing societies. He remembers, too, that there was a different version of skat, so it seemed, at every table and the arguments were many and good-natured.

Oftentimes the members would desert their beer gardens in the summer and repair to a nearby farm, where the routine was unchanged—in fact, improved, for here there was usually a photographer to press the button and later offer copies to the proud parents. That explains all those pictures we have today, possibly.

There's a true story of the athlete at a local college who was preparing for an examination.

"I think," he confided to a friend, "I know some of the questions, but where can I get the answers?"

Hans Kindler came to town Sunday as the soloist for the symphony concert and told another story about the temperamental Molinari.

It happened on the West Coast. Molinari, rehearsing, had broken all available batons in his excitement. Finally, in a spasm of temperament, he ripped his valuable gold watch out of his vest pocket an. hurled it to the earth.

The next day, when he turned out for rehearsal, a dozen dollar watches were spread along his stand—the gift of the musicians.

When Attorney William A. Magee appeared before the county commissioners a few weeks ago to argue for a downtown location for the Town Hall for his clients, an old political reporter mumbled something about the tricks that time and politics will play. When the learned Mr. Magee was mayor the three present county commissioners all served under him, in one capacity or another. Joe Armstrong was director of Mr. Magee's public works, and E. V. Babcock was city councilman. And in his second term Mr. Magee made Col. McGovern his chief of detectives.

Mr. Magee, incidentally, was once a newspaper reporter but, so he says himself, not a good one. His uncle, Christopher Magee, owned the old Times and, the law business not being engrossing to a newly-graduated devotee, William Addison Magee got himself a job and salary as a reporter for his uncle. While Mr. Magee insists that he was a failure as a reporter, some of the men who worked with him explain that he was not successful because when his city editor gave him an assignment he immediately hiked over to the law library or a lawyer's office and spent the next few hours studying his hobby—municipal law.

DRY OFFICIAL BALKS EAGLE CARD QUIZ

Deputy Administrator Shies At Questioning; Mis-Use Of Badges Held Illegal

Assistant United States Attorney Raymond D. Evans is still awaiting a reply to an inquiry he said he made two weeks ago to R. S. Krause, deputy prohibition administrator, seeking to ascertain if prohibition agents used confiscated membership cards of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, in gaining entrance to lodges of the organization.

The letter was mailed to the deputy administrator January 21. Krause declined to confirm or deny the allegation, or having received such a communication from the assistant prosecutor. Instead he referred the interviewer to Attorney Evans. There is said to be a state law against use of membership cards of fraternal organizations, by other than the persons to whom they were issued.

Attorney Evans said the matter was brought to his attention by J. Earl Jacobs, clerk of Common Pleas Court, who showed him a warning sent to Eagle lodges by A. J. Dougherty, state secretary. A membership card of Jacobs, issued by the Homestead lodge, was listed by the state secretary as among others that were alleged to be in possession of prohibition agents. Some of the Homestead cards were said to have been used to gain entrance to Eagle headquarters in Harrisburg, before the Pinchot inauguration.

Pershing Scored Army Training In U. S. Camps

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By JOHN J. PERSHING,

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

The progress of our preparation at home at this time (December, 1917), was far from being satisfactory, as tests of newly arrived troops showed their instruction was not up to our standards in France.

It was evident that my recommendations were being disregarded. This faulty training at home threw an extra burden upon us of training officers and men after their arrival.

Gen. Pershing

I had urged that we should follow our own conception of training, emphasizing the rifle and bayonet as the supreme weapons of the infantry soldier, and insisted upon training for open warfare. It will be pertinent to quote my cable about this time criticizing the policy of the War Department as set forth in one of the training pamphlets sent to me:

"In my opinion this pamphlet is not in harmony with the recommendations contained in any cablegram in regard to the training of divisions in the United States. The first paragraph of War Department document announces that 'in all the military training of a division, under existing conditions, training for trench warfare is of paramount importance.'

"I invite attention to my cablegram and repeat my recommendations contained therein that intensive training in all phases of open warfare be accepted as the principal mission of divisions before embarkation, trench warfare and the use of special arms being taught in connection with the assumption of an offensive from an entrenched position. It is urged that future programs of training for divisions in the United States be prepared accordingly."

Officers Instructed

The training of officers for the general staff, which also necessarily had to be undertaken in France, was well under way at the General Staff School, at Langres, 40 miles south of Chaumont, under the able direction of Maj. Gen. McAndrew.

The three months' course of instruction was based upon our staff organization and was conducted by our own instructors, with two or three French and an equal number of British officers to assist as lecturers. The difficulty was the scarcity of officers for detail as students.

We were confronted with the task of building up an army of millions that would require as many trained staff officers as we had officers in the whole Regular Army at the beginning of the war. To meet this urgent demand Washington was asked to send over in advance a small percentage of officers from each division for instruction, but only a few ever came.

Out of this first class of about 75 officers at the General Staff School, most of them were taken from our meager forces in France. Unfortunately all the schools were short of student personnel, and it was not until the eleventh hour, when new divisions began to come over under pressure late in the spring, that any considerable number of officers could be spared from our forces in France for special staff instruction.

Training Methods

Meanwhile, our program of training in France had become fairly well established under the immediate direction and observation of the Training Section of the General Staff. Most of our officers were firm believers in the soundness of our doctrines, although a few continued to defer to the opinions of French instructors, who were generally committed to the theory that trench training was necessary.

Our schedule of instruction consisted of three periods. The first included practice in the use of the various weapons, with tactical exercises for units up to the division over such terrain as might be available. The second embraced a month's tour in the trenches by smaller units with French regiments, supported by their artillery. The third concluded the course with combined work of infantry, artillery and aviation conducted in the training area, after which the division went again into the trenches under its

Two Men Seized in Theater Quizzed on Turtle Creek Valley and City Holdups

City detectives today were searching for safe-crackers who broke open four safes in the offices of Heckler Brothers Company, furnace dealers, 919 Liberty avenue, last night.

Three safes contained records, most of which were strewn on the floor. An unestimated amount of cash was stolen from the fourth and largest safe, in a balcony office.

The yeggs entered by the fire escape of an adjoining building, sliding down to the roof of the Heckler Building by a rope.

STORE HELD UP

Three armed bandits obtained $20 in the holdup last night of the store of George W. Donley, at 715 North Dallas avenue. They escaped in an automobile.

Two bandit suspects dragged from a downtown theater yesterday were being held by county detectives today for questioning in connection with recent robberies downtown and in the Turtle Creek Valley.

Their arrest followed apprehension of an East Pittsburgh youth who told Chief of Police Frank Kelly of their alleged activities. The youth, taken into custody on complaint of his mother, is James Murray, 18, of 815 Braddock avenue, East Pittsburgh. He had two suitcases he said were given him by the suspects. They contained jewelry, detectives reported. Murray was turned over to county detectives.

TRAIL LEADS TO THEATER

The youth told the sleuths he was to have met his two acquaintances in Pittsburgh. Detectives accompanied him to the supposed rendezvous, where it was learned that two men answering the description had entered a nearby theater.

Murray pointed them out in the darkened interior and they were taken into custody. One attempted to pull a revolver, detectives said, but was disarmed after a brief struggle. They gave their names as William Logan, alias Novak, and Glen Crandell, alias Bill Ray, both of 202 West Stockton avenue. Logan had two revolvers and Crandell one, detectives said.

Murray told detectives, they reported, that the pair boasted of holding up a drug store at Diamond and Smithfield streets. Murray is being held as a material witness.

THREE ROB MAN IN BEDROOM

Confronted by three armed men in his bedroom on the second floor of 3419 Louisa street, Oakland, Patrick J. Murray was robbed, early today, of $83 and threatened with death if he made an outcry, he reported to police.

After warning him against calling for help, Murray told police, the trio fled and drove off in an automobile.

'Smell' Warrant Quashed, Raid Ruled Illegal

A "smell" search and seizure warrant executed by government prohibition agents in a raid of a club at 6008 Kirkwood street, February 1, 1930, was quashed, and alleged contraband liquor confiscated was suppressed as evidence against Fred H. Drum, in an opinion and order handed down by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson.

In holding that the raid was made illegally, the court said affidavits in support of the application for the search warrant did not set forth any evidence to the effect that an association, persons or incorporated club was operating the building, nor any inference that intoxicating liquor was being sold.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

From all the pictures in the papers of these admirals that are to be at the Smedley Butler trial in full dress, it's not a legal procedure — it's a social triumph. When you see an admiral going along the street with those wide, gold-braided, tasselled spring-boards on his shoulders, we don't know if he is going to a wedding or a hanging. Poor old Smedeley. He just seems to have a mania for getting in bad in peace times. But you let a war start and there don't ever seem to be any kick about what he does.

DENIES FEDERAL TAXES WOULD BE RAISED

Engard Sees Prosperity Through Payment; Talks Here in Place of O'Neil

Bitterly assailing Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon for his opposition to the cash bonus plan for World War veterans, State Commander Charles I. Engard last night urged American Legionnaires to carry to their senators and congressmen their demand for the cash settlement as a means of relief necessitated by the industrial depression.

NOT A BURDEN

Col. Paul V. McNutt, of Bloomington, Ill., past national commander of the Legion, at Bettis Field where he hopped off for Harrisburg to fill a speaking engagement for National Commander Ralph T. O'Neil, who is ill, said the bonus would not prove burdensome on the country. The greatest need of ex-soldiers, he asserted, is 6,000 more hospital beds to take care of those still suffering from effects of war.

Engard spoke at the tenth annual commander's banquet of the American Legion in the William Penn Hotel, after issuing the statement attacking Mellon. More than 500 ex-soldiers were present.

The state commander was the guest speaker of the evening in the absence of National Commander Ralph T. O'Neil, of Topeka, Kan., who was kept away by illness in New York. Other speakers included John B. Nicklas, Jr., Allegheny County commander; John S. Herron, president of City Council; County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, Judge George V. Moore, Judge F. D. Schoonmaker, of the United States Court, and the Rev. James R. Cox, of Old St. Patrick's Church.

DISAGREES WITH MELLON

Engard denied Secretary Mellon's contention that a cash bonus settlement would increase national taxation and insisted the plan would bring about greater prosperity, putting money into the hands of ex-soldiers which would immediately go into circulation, giving help to needy and unemployed.

Commander Engard also "deplored" what he termed "disgraceful hospitalization" of war veterans. He said:

"Buildings at the mental hospitals in Grays Ferry road have been standing for a hundred years. They are a firetrap, a disgrace not only to the city of Philadelphia, but to the veterans of the late war who are sent there from all parts of the state.

"We have had some disabled men who were placed in jails on account of no beds being available for them."

PAVING BRICK MEN REPORT BIG GAIN

Convention Heads Show Optimism for Year 1931; Plead for Assured Jobs

Paving brick manufacturers gained a 20 per cent increase in the use of their product during the past year, despite the industrial depression, according to F. B. Dunn, of Pittsburgh, acting president of the National Paving Brick Manufacturers' association, which opened a three-day convention today in the William Penn Hotel.

The increase in the use of the paving brick for road construction is expected to be continued through this year, he said. Dunn cited the increased business for the industry would be reflected in other businesses, particularly the coal fields, since increased fuel for making bricks would be necessary.

Making a plea to the manufacturers at the opening session, Mr. Dunn cited the need of giving employes assurance of continued employment. He said:

"We have a substantial investment in every man who has been with our industry for any length of time. Every sincere salesman or promoter of brick pavements is bound to build up an asset of friends of our products over the year and we should appreciate his value by making him feel that his employment is secure."

Other speakers included George F. Schlesinger, of Washington, chief engineer and director of the association, and Bennett Chappel. The general sessions will start tomorrow with technical discussions featuring the program. The annual banquet will be held tomorrow night.

Penn. Girl Made Happy

MANY times a child has everything to make for happy and still is dumb blue. The may not be the youngster's fault. Often it is due to a condition easily corrected.

Take the experience of Mrs. Gertrude Sees, 216 Roberts Ave., Philadelphia, who says: "Nothing seemed to please Georgianna. She was fretful, feverish, wasn't sleeping right. She was constipated.

"We saw California Fig Syrup advertised and got some. It relieved her trouble promptly, made her bright and happy again. We have used it for three years."

Mothers by thousands praise this pure vegetable product. Children love it. Doctors recommend it to relieve constipation, feverishness, fretfulness, headaches; to open the bowels in colds or children's ailments.

Appetite is increased by the use of California Fig Syrup; breath is sweetened; coated tongue is cleared; digestion and assimilation are aided; weak bowels and stomach are strengthened.

AIR CLUB HEAD AT CITY PORT

William Lawrence Saunders, president of the Aero Club of Philadelphia, stopped in Pittsburgh en route to Cleveland yesterday to get a glimpse of the new Mifflin Township Municipal Airport. Mrs. Saunders was with him.

The official discussed the new municipal airport in Philadelphia, which is being constructed at a cost of $10,000,000. He was anxious, he said, to see the Allegheny County Airport.

By arrangement with Clifford Ball, of the Clifford Ball Air Line, Saunder's pilot circled the site of the new airport before heading for Cleveland.

In an interview, Mr. Saunders declared air line progress was hampered much in the same manner as railroad lines in the early days of the steam engine. He averred it was the duty of politicians and law-makers to break down the prejudice to air travel.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Bride-Elect To Be Guest Of Honor

There is nothing folks seem to enjoy doing more than entertaining for brides or brides-to-be. There are always any number of luncheons and bridges and teas honoring them. This morning I can tell you of several social functions honoring a bride of this month.

Mary Rowland Clark, daughter of James Bly Clark, of Fox Chapel road, whose marriage to Joseph Currier Willey, son of the Raymond Willeys, of Beacon street, will be an event of February 11, is being feted at many social affairs. I know of plans for several more parties in her honor. Jack Currier Lewis will give a dinner party this Friday evening in the home of his parents, the James Edward Lewises, of Fox Chapel road. Saturday afternoon Mrs. M. H. Slocum will give a luncheon in her home in Edgerton place. And Saturday night Edwin Rhea will give a dinner party in the University Club.

Announce Marriage

The bride is a graduate of St. Mary's School, Raleigh, N. C., and of the King Smith Studio School of Washington. Her fiance is a graduate of the Kiskiminetas School and of Amherst College.

Already tentative plans are being made for debuts for the coming winter. The John G. The Samuel Clarke Reeds, of Murrayhill avenue, are planning a winter debut for their daughter, Ellinor, who will graduate in June from Dobbs Ferry. Her bow probably will be made in November.

STYLISTS PREDICT ANOTHER BIG SEASON FOR STRAWS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 4.—The first thing that comes to our head is hats, now that spring is sartorially established in the showrooms of the leading milliners. Straws show the trend of the mode which is to fancy weaves as well as the old-established favorites. It certainly does seem as though it will be a straw season with a vengeance, although, of course, there will be felts and fabrics a-plenty for the woman desiring them. But most of us, I am sure, will easily fall a victim to the charms of the new straw hats, however honest our intentions towards felt may have been.

Brims are present albeit not too much in evidence. For they are rolled and manipulated so as to form a flattering frame for the face and at the same time to give a good line to the bonnet. So the brim will be brim full of industry next spring.

TO GET A GLIMPSE of spring hats during the cold, bleak days of winter, is one of the best methods of combating that cold and chilly season. And so there is always a crowd to view the spring hats long before there will be a chance to wear them in town. For the Riviera, of course, there are wide-brimmed models, but these are certainly of a different genre from the orthodox spring hat. The new, early spring model with the tassel is from the advance collection of Le Monnier. It is of fine picot straw in dark green with cord trimming and heavy silk tassel of matching green. The brim is set back from the front of the crown and rolled across the top of the head with very little flare.

THE OTHER MODEL, so suggestive of the vernal season, is from Mme. Jose. It is of supple tricot woven of black horsehair. The rolled back brim is bordered with smartly flaring horsehair braid. Double aigrette brushes are drawn through the peak at the center front of the brim.

CROSSING CRASH BLAST KILLS 3

SALT LAKE CITY Utah, Feb. 4.—(INS.)—Three men were dead and 10 others suffered from injuries today following the explosion of a motor truck loaded with dynamite caps, when it was struck by a Denver and Rio Grande passenger train.

An inquest was to be held today over the bodies of the three victims. The dead were J. E. Begeban, of Eureka; B. F. Bugg, engineer of the train, and James Prinsen, of this city, official of the Western Power Company. E. W. James, fireman of the locomotive, suffered severe burns and may die, according to hospital authorities.

Begeban was driving the dynamite truck late yesterday when it was struck by the Ogden-bound train. The explosion demolished the motor truck, tore away one side of the locomotive and demolished the engine cab.

Several passengers in the two coaches were badly shaken, but none suffered injury. Scores of windows in a nearby packing plant were shattered.

CUBAN STRIKE MAY CONTINUE

HAVANA, Feb. 4.—(INS.)—Several thousand stevedores, linotype operators, metallurgical workers, carpenters and maritime workers were on strike today, protesting in general against the Machado regime and in particular against the suspension of constitutional guarantees by the Cuban Legislature.

As a result of the strike none of the Spanish language newspapers in Havana appeared this morning.

According to present plans the strike will come to an end at 6 o'clock tonight, after a 24-hour stopage, but representatives of the unions involved are meeting today to consider whether the strike should be continued.

Efforts to make the strike general failed when police last night broke up an unauthorized parade of 2,000 strikers who were attempting to get all workmen to leave their tasks. Many of the strikers were arrested.

Editor Weds Widow Of Ex-Gov. Hadley

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Henry J. Haskell, 56, editor of the Kansas City Star, and his bride, the former Mrs. Agnes Lee Hadley, 54, widow of ex-Gov. Herbert S. Hadley, of Missouri, were on a wedding voyage to Naples today. They sailed last night on the liner Roma.

They were married in St. Thomas's Episcopal Church yesterday by Dr. Roelif H. Brooks, the rector. Attending were his son, Henry C. Haskell, her eldest son, John M. Hadley, and Mrs. A. Ross Hill, wife of the former president of the University of Missouri.

Joe Saltis Freed As 'Public Enemy'

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—(INS.)—Joe Saltis, former beer baron and now a gentleman agrarian of Winter, Wis., was free to return to his farmlands today following his acquittal on a charge of vagrancy as one of Chicago's "public enemies."

Five days of testimony by the state proved insufficient to convict the former South Side beer boss and the charge was nolle prossed late yesterday.

EXPERT WARNS OF FIRE PERIL

Disregard of dangerous conditions by intelligent persons is creating a situation that makes nearly every fire a serious menace to the community, Frank C. McAuliffe, Chicago fire prevention expert, said at the fourth "fire school" of the Chamber of Commerce last night. The meeting was attended by 500 janitors, watchmen and building superintendents. He said in part:

"'I' is an astounding fact that what little protection we throw about our children in the schools, theaters and churches, even less is given to them in their homes. If a fire inspector could visit all the homes in our country, he would find little children nightly climbing up a single narrow stairway to sleep over fire breeding basement conditions that are appalling."

Feel Safe always

Specify Kotex when you buy sanitary pads

HOURS at the opera, hours in business, hours out-of-doors—always the feeling of perfect freedom when Kotex is your sanitary protection. Kotex is shaped to fit under any sort of gown. It is highly absorbent (5 times more by test than surgical cotton). It is guaranteed to give more protection, longer protection than any other sanitary pad.

Kotex deodorizes. It is soft—not merely a surface softness but a delicate, lasting softness. It is adjustable, because of the layer construction of its absorbent filler, so that you can change its size to suit your changing needs. It may (and this is important) be worn on either side with equal efficiency.

It is disposable, easily, quickly—one very important reason for preferring this modern sanitary protection.

By SALLY MARTIN

Should a Husband Let His Wife Go to Work?

Has a wife a right to work?

Has a husband a right to stop her?

Is Papa's dignity lowered if Mamma brings home a pay check?

Or should a Real Man revel in his wife's business success as though it were his own?

Bill Bowles thought he should. He didn't feel hurt because his wife was happier in the business world than she was mending his socks and chasing dust. In fact he was proud of her success as a lady professional . . . and he didn't feel that because she had married him she owed it to him to live her life his way. He was perfectly willing that she should live in a way that made her happy and satisfied.

All of this Bill Bowles believed . . . and said so. It took grit to say so, for the average gentleman likes to believe that he's the Star Actor in the domestic scene. And Bill must have known he'd be booed. Which he was . . . promptly . . . by Proctor. For Proctor isn't going to have any smart little woman cramping his style.

A Different View

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I'd like to say a few words to that Smart Alec, Bill Bowles. He's a disgrace to his sex. So he wouldn't want to have a homekeeping wife, huh? Well, well! And he wants one that brings in the money. Some husband, he is! Anyway, I guess he knows a good thing when he sees it, eh?

"Personally, I'd be ashamed to allow my wife to work and earn money. If I wasn't able to take care of her, I'd figure we might as well quit, and let her take care of herself. I certainly wouldn't allow her to work while I could keep things running. I would leave if my wife insisted on taking a job. It's a man's place to do the outside earning and the woman's place to take care of the home, and I intend that things shall be run that way at my house.

"I suppose this wife of his comes home and opens a couple of cans and fries a little hamburg, and calls that a meal. Well, that isn't my idea of a home. And I wouldn't stand for it.

Says She Is Dumb

"But I suppose so long as she gets a good salary, he figures he can put up with a little neglect for the sake of having that coming in. Probably if she quit her job, he couldn't keep things going. And that's why he pretends to be so glad to have her trotting down town every day instead of taking care of her home. And she's dumb enough to do it!

"Probably she'd like to stay home like other wives, but she's afraid to mention it. Well, all I've got to say is I think that a man who lets his wife work is a mighty poor stick, and if he had the spunk that a he-man should have, he'd see that she stayed at home. If he can't make enough to support her, he has no business being married. And if he does make enough, and still he lets her work, he's a sap.

"PROCTOR'S."

Aw, gwan! Stop talking like old man Noah. Women are people before they are wives—and continue to be so thereafter, much as the fact may peeve you, Proctor. Do all men like to sell socks? Of course they don't. Then why should all women like to mend them? God made woman to be man's helpmate, but he didn't specify where she was to do the helping. And if she can help better by filing letters in an office than she can by peeling spuds in a sink, why the hell?

Things Different Now

As for a husband's will being law, wake up! Look at the calendar! This is the year 1931. Husbands stopped being a Privileged Class ages 'n' ages ago, Old Ekk. Nowadays they are just people with the usual privileges. And the sooner you are hep to that fact, the happier you'll be.

Dear Sally:

"I want to say a great big good word for Bill Bowles. I think he is the most fair-minded man I ever heard of. And one of the most intelligent and least stuck on himself.

"These men who talk so loudly of 'not letting' their wives work make me sick. So far as I can see, the idea that a woman should bury herself at home, no matter what talents she has or how deep an urge she may have to use them, in just pure conceit on the man's part. Why on earth should any man consider it a reflection on himself if his wife does some work outside the home?"

Have Same Talents

"Isn't a woman, even a wife, a person in her own right? I think she is. And not all women, romantic notions to the contrary, are fitted for housekeeping. Some of them, like men, have talents for being doctors or lawyers or artists. What possible shame can it be to a man if his wife happens to be gifted that way? And what possible shame can it be to him if she uses those talents? He is still perfectly free to go out and make just as big a success as he is capable of himself and, if he allows the fact that she doesn't stay at home to cramp his style, it's just a sign of his own weakness . . . and an alibi for it generally.

"I am a professional woman myself. I have two children, and I love them. But in my work as a doctor, I take care of hundreds of children where, if I stayed home, I would only be taking care of two. And mine are not neglected. They have the best and most loving of care. And we have the greatest romps and fun together every evening when I come home. Far more fun than if I were home with them all day because, as it is, seeing them is an event . . . both for me and for them. At first my husband wanted me to be a 'home-keeping wife' but now he sees things in a broader way, and he is happy. And he has told me hundreds of times that he is glad I didn't give up my work to dust and sweep rugs and boil milk bottles.

"Here's to Bill Bowles! May there be more like him! Men who realize that women have some rights as well as men."

"LAURA."

From which you might conclude that Bill Bowles started some battle. He did. And if you don't get in on it with your opinion, you're missing a lot of excitement.

'There, Little Girl, Don't Cry--'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"There, Little Girl, Don't Cry—You Have Broken Your Doll—I Know."

And the lovely little figure—that came to seem so live to you, has fallen from his pedestal in your garden, and lies in piteous fragments in the grass. Here a tip of a little wing; there a thumb or a toe; his pretty nose is chipped; a round leg off at the knee; his fingers broken, and you blink through the tears with terror to see that he is only plaster as his curley-locked head lies staring smilingly at the sky!

If you were the only one who had ever found your Love broken in your garden, then would you be right to think the end of the world had come! But the romantic world is littered with the ruins of fallen little love-dolls—antique and modern. And maidens have learned to smile and dry the tears as they view the fragments—try the crack in their hearts and find it is not fatal—and then set up a new idol on the pedestal!

Out of the ruins where a figure of Love has fallen, always grows some live thing—that always stays green in the garden; it is a bit of new character from the dust of the idol and the heart of the "Little Girl." It depends upon what kind of a little girl she is—what the plant that springs there will be.

Sometimes it is a bitter weed that she tries to root out—and never can. Sometimes it is a flower, gold and white and bejeweled, making the maiden richer, a lily rising out of a dead Love.

NELL BRINKLEY.

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Gracious Detail of Social Life

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When a new acquaintance just before saying "goodnight" says, "I am very glad to have met you," what is the proper response?

2. Is it necessary to answer letters of sympathy for the loss of a near relative? If so, how should it be worded for a lodge?

M. W.

1. It is natural, and polite, for us to thank the person first for this pleasant and kind comment, and then to add that we, too, have found pleasure in the meeting. Something like this: "Thank you. I am very glad to have met you, too," or "Thank you. You are very kind to say so. It has been a great pleasure to meet you, too," or "That is very kind of you to say so. I am happy to have met you, too, Mr. Graham, and I hope that we shall meet again sometime."

This kind of answer can be a very gracious detail of our social life, and it is, of course, not so much what we say as the way in which we say it. But whatever we say, there should be two elements in our answer—the thank you for the other person's comment, and the expression of our own pleasure in the meeting.

2. Yes, all letters of sympathy, and all flower messages of sympathy should be acknowledged by a note of appreciation. The notes need not be long—a sentence or two will say our appreciation—but they should be written, and they should be sincere.

Something like this is all that is ever necessary:

My Dear Mrs. Bell:

You were most kind to write us such a beautiful letter of sympathy and friendship and to send us the lovely flowers as a symbol of your sweet understanding. We appreciate most deeply your goodness to us, and we want so much to have you know how much you helped us.

Most sincerely yours,

This general form of letter would be just as appropriate to write to a lodge, adapting it where it is necessary.

Questions on Grammar

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I suppose questions on grammar are not strictly in your line, but I thought perhaps you would be kind enough to help settle an argument for me.

Which of these sentences is correct:

It has all been fixed up between she and I?

It has all been fixed up between her and me? L. H.

The latter sentence is correct—"It has all been fixed up between her and me." The word between is a preposition, and is followed, therefore, by the objective case—her and me.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Is Puzzled by the Mention of Edith Fairfax's Name

"I wouldn't go down into that dining room again for anything you could offer me," I told Lillian firmly, when she had told me that I must not telephone Helena Brixton so early, and suggested my going down with her for a second cup of coffee.

"Why?" she asked, then grinned. "Old Phil didn't stage any public declaration, did he?"

"Of course not," I retorted tartly, but I could not control a flush at the remembrance of his embarrassing furtive caress of my hand.

"Well, something's on the well-known bean," she said, and I was thankful that she had ignored the flush. "And I'm not proud. Also I have chow money and taxi fare. Fly with me, dearest, to some other eating place far from Philip Veritzen and his naughty ways. It won't take either of us a minute to put on our wraps."

"I'll be with you in a minute," I said, and, indeed, it was little more when I was out in the hall again. She came from her own door a few seconds later, and threw up her hand in acknowledgment of my superior dispatch.

"Do you want to go down the service elevator?" she gibed. "Old Phil never takes that, to my certain knowledge."

"Don't be absurd," I said. "But if we meet him—"

"Dispose of him with efficiency and dispatch," she finished. "Don't worry! I'm the most effective little incinerator going."

But there was no sign of Mr. Veritzen either in the elevator or in the lobby, and I joined Lillian in the taxicab with the feeling of a truant escaped from school.

"Where shall we go?" she asked as the driver waited for directions.

"If you don't mind, I'd like to go near the florist—you know"—I named the man I wished to see about the decorations for the party. "Then at 9 o'clock I can go in to see him."

"All right, Efficiency Edgar," she laughed. "As it so happens, there's the spiffiest coffee house with the best food very near there. Otherwise, you'd roam farther afield, for I'm ravenous, and I crave nothing but the best. I'm sure you'll like the place."

"I've breakfasted," I reminded her.

"I'm not contradicting you, but since when have you been refusing an extra cup of coffee in the morning or any other time?"

"Since never," I answered, laughing, and in a few minutes we were seated opposite each other in the restaurant. Lillian cannily had chosen a corner table in the least attractive part of the restaurant. Thus there was no one within hearing distance, even if we had not spoken in the almost inaudible tones to which we trained ourselves while I worked under Lillian in the Government Secret Service during the World War.

"Now!" she said, when she had given her order, "begin at the beginning. I'm simply dying of the ailment which killed the poor old cat."

"The beginning was very early this morning," I said ruefully, and then I rapidly sketched for her my various interviews with Philip Veritzen.

"And that's all."

"All that you mean to tell me," she said shrewdly. "But that's all right. I don't blame you for omitting the old lad's pathetic attempt to start a petting party. And—nobody can blame him. But if you're wise, you will omit to think about 'em also. Just concentrate your mind on those flowers Phil's going to send up. Boy, am I going to be at that dining room when they arrive? Just watch me. And also, old dear, you needn't trouble to tell him the color of my gown. I'll impart that information to him myself. Incidentally, it will be black lace, and I know exactly the shade of orchids I want. I'm going to get them while the getting's good."

She was so like a gamin in her zestful appreciation of her old friend's munificence that I could not help laughing. She looked at me speculatively.

"That's all right. I know I'm a 'gimme.' But what will you bet that Edith Fairfax won't also say she'll tell him herself about the color of her gown?"

Her retort startled and puzzled me. For the moment I had forgotten that Dicky's business partner was to be included in the party. But Lillian did not know that, and I wondered why she had dragged Edith's name into our discussion in so palpably forced and clumsy an allusion.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Indigestion May Impair Hearing

Can you believe that deafness may be produced by certain types of indigestion?

Not long ago I saw an interesting account of a paper read at a medical society. The author contended that certain forms of intestinal indigestion are capable of impairing the hearing.

Dr. Copeland

For a number of years I have believed there is a direct relationship between dyspepsia and deafness. Some of the food authorities have said so for a long time. The latest writer thinks the pancreas is responsible for certain conditions which may have lowered hearing power as a symptom.

The pancreas is that organ of the body commonly known as the "sweetbread." It is a long, narrow gland opening into the intestinal canal.

What is it for and what does the pancreas do? It secretes a fluid containing elements essential to the proper digestion of fats. Some of these elements are known as "digestive ferments."

The ferments are mysterious substances which appear to act much as yeast does. All the processes of life are dependent on their presence. There are many, many ferments, but those produced by the pancreas are among the most important. Unless they are formed trouble is bound to occur.

It must be recalled that the most digestive processes occur in the intestines, rather than in the stomach. The function of the intestinal canal is apt to be overlooked.

In simple cases where there is no greater disturbance than a lack of pancreatic secretion, there is apt to be pain in the abdomen after eating. In chronic cases there are the familiar symptoms of dyspepsia. The digestion appears to be slow. Discomfort continues for a considerable time after taking food.

When this failure of intestinal digestion is long continued a number of annoyances result. Sugar and fat are not taken comfortably. It often happens that one who loves sweets, such as candy and pastry, finds he cannot take them or fat foods without discomfort.

In chronic cases there may be so remote a symptom as decreases in the hearing power. That may seem pretty far fetched, but it is within the limits of possibility.

Discuss this matter with your doctor. Not one of the symptoms you have may be due to trouble in the pancreas. But if there is a lack of the pancreatic secretions, he may make up for the lack by giving you an appropriate extract of pancreas.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

White-haired beauties must be careful not to use hair tonics containing glycerine; glycerine will yellow snowy crests. Hot curling irons are taboo. When eggs are used for a shampoo the whites alone are recommended.

There is a tendency to train eyebrows so that the outer terminal sweeps downward as far as it can be made to go. Effective on the thin or oval face but not so good on the plump one. Unless skillfully lined and arched, brows of this character will give a girl's face a questioning expression or one of faint surprise.

The most beautiful eyebrow is, in form, like the silhouette of the wing of a bird in flight; a short lift at the inner end, then a sweeping downward stroke which tapers gradually to a fine, sharp point. The eyebrow that is strictly on the level, skipping straight across the forehead, should be brushed downward at either end, and upward in the center, suggesting an arch. Eyebrows that are united should be divorced.

Perennial fretters are weak sisters. They aren't the kind of gals men send orchids to. Worry is a dragon that should be slain, yet some women take it to their hearts and make a pet of it. It claws lines into pretty faces. It makes the digestion sulk. It has a bad effect upon the circulation, so that no rose blooms flush the alabaster cheek. When the mind is cyclonical, there is panic in the central nervous system. Worry doesn't pay any dividends; it kills affection; it is a washout. To overcome worry a woman must create for herself a simple workable system of philosophy and tell herself what a long-legged fool she is.

Burning smarting feet will respond to different treatments. One is the bootbath of tepid water to which baking soda has been added, followed by a talcum rub. Another consists of anointing the feet with cold cream, massaging and rubbing, covering the feet with Turkish towels which have been wrung out of cold water. A salt glow is refreshing. Moisten a cupful of ordinary table salt and rub into the skin.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Thursday, February 5

A day of very lively conditions and much stable progress may be predicted from the ruling planetary configurations. A breaking up of long-thwarting and crystallized conditions may be looked for, followed by great and judicious activity, especially in connection with property, labor, industry and all pertaining to writings, publication and promotion. It is a time for forging ahead with vigor and determination for the purpose of stabilizing the fortunes and securing possessions.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of great opportunity for stabilizing the fortunes and securing enduring success. It is a time for reaping advantage from old restrictions and limitations.

A child born on this day should be capable, clever, industrious and steadfast in its effort to win substantial place and fortune through its own merits and efforts.

PIRATES TO OPEN FLAG CHASE IN CHICAGO

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

BEST IN PITTSBURGH — WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1931 — TWENTY-THREE

PITT CUTS GRID DRILLS

Sport Comment

By JAMES J. LONG

Schedule Hurts Bucs. | West Point's Visitors.
Mileage Greatest Ever. | Track Coach Alarmed.

36 NIGHTS ON ROAD FOR 77 GAMES

JEWEL ENS and his Pirates will have to do more than fight seven other ball clubs in the coming National League pennant race. They will also have to cope with a decidedly unfavorable schedule. The official playing program, made public today, leaves a whole lot to be desired, from a Pittsburgh viewpoint, and if the Buccaneers succeed in getting anywhere in the flag chase it will be done in spite of many added obstacles thrown in their path by the arrangement of playing dates.

Jewel Ens

It is in the all-important item of travel that the Pittsburgh club is made to suffer chiefly by the provisions of the 1931 schedule. In that respect the slate is the most unsatisfactory within memory. The Pirates' mileage is greater than ever before, and the weight of the handicaps under which they will be forced to play may be judged from the fact that in running off their 77 games abroad during the season they will be required to spend no fewer than 36 nights on the road.

THE BUCS ALWAYS are at a disadvantage on account of extra travel. That is because, as the only Western club in either of the major leagues not permitted to play Sunday games at home, they must make many extra jumps out of Pittsburgh and back again in order to play Sunday contests abroad and keep up with the schedule. That's a handicap in itself, forcing the Rovers to play many a game during a campaign when they are off edge as result of train rides.

Under the new schedule, conditions in that respect will be even worse. Thirty-six nights of travel to play 77 games in the other cities of the circuit means almost an average of a night on the road for every two games played abroad. Take the Cincinnati schedule alone, for instance. The Bucs must visit Cincinnati no fewer than six times to play 11 games, and another bad feature is that they will wind up their Redland schedule for the year as early as August 9.

EARLY JULY PRESENTS more tough spots. It will find the Pirates playing five games in four different cities in four consecutive days—In Boston July 2, in Brooklyn July 3, then a jump to Pittsburgh for two games on the Fourth, followed by another jump to Cincinnati for a game on July 5.

During the same period the St. Louis club also will have a tough assignment, being required to play six games in four different cities in four successive days—in New York July 2, two games in Philadelphia July 3, two games in Pittsburgh on the Fourth and in Chicago July 5. The Cardinals also will finish their season's home series of 11 games in Cincinnati as early as July 11.

AMONG OTHER BAD features in the schedule it might be pointed out that the Pirates are kept away from home too long, from May 9 to May 29, again from June 17 to July 8 except for the Fourth of July, and again from August 5 to September 3, except for August 27; that they are kept at home too long from July 9 to August 8, and from September 4 to August 25; that they will not make an appearance in Chicago after May 31 until September 6; that the Cubs will finish their year's schedule at Forbes Field as early as July 11 except for a single game on August 27 while they are en route to St. Louis; that Pittsburgh gets both conflicts in Chicago, and that the division of Sundays abroad is unequal, with the Pirates slated to play six Sundays in Cincinnati, four in Chicago, two each in Brooklyn and St. Louis, and only one each in New York and Boston.

John A. Heydler

THE UNSATISFACTORY NATURE of the schedule given out today by League President John A. Heydler results from the booking of three intersectional series, or East-West trips, before the Fourth of July, instead of only two, as usual. These first three East-West trips are crowded into 56 days, May 9 to July 3.

This in spite of the fact that 87 days are available between July 3 and the finish of the season. There will be as many East-West trips in 56 days starting May 9 as in the last 87 days of the season. The schedule, particularly as far as the Pittsburgh club is concerned, falls far short of being a good job.

REMARKING THAT THE sport slogan used to be "Join the Notre Dame football team and see the world," an Eastern scribe suggests that another good one would be "Become a West Point cadet and have the world come to you."

The suggestion was born of last Saturday's activities at the Point, when six different visiting athltic teams appeared in action there. They had variety as well as number, as among them were the Ohio State basketball team, the Iowa wrestling squad and the boxing team of Western Maryland.

"Track is a popular spring sport and calls to its ranks more boys than do baseball and rowing combined," writes Art Smith, track coach at West Virginia. "As a track coach of 18 years' experience, I can truthfully say that spring football practice has worked and is working irreparable harm to track athletics. If some check is not put on it, I am sure that our standard of track athletes will suffer eventually, and that in time this effect will be noticed with regret in our showings in the summary of future Olympic games. I agree with such well-known football coaches as Bill Roper and Wally Steffen that no real good comes out of the selfish practice of spring football.

"MOST BOYS WHO go out for spring football would rather go out for track or for some other sport. However, they are obliged to turn out and rarely have any choice in the matter. They have no interest in the practice, and, like the slaves of old, in most cases, are driven to a task that has no appeal to them.

"Football is a grand game, but it is a fall sport, and, as such, should be made to confine itself to its own territory or period. Spring football practice is an encroachment on track athletics and other spring sports, and brings about a condition that is undesirable and regrettable."

THAT A FORMER Pirate pitcher continues to drift around in the minor leagues is disclosed by an announcement that Herbert (Buckshot) May has just signed a contract with the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast League.

Edgar (Rip) Miller

This is his fourth club and third league on four years. He pitched for San Francisco in 1928, for Memphis in the Southern Association in 1929, and for Pueblo in the Western League last season. He was a free agent when he signed with Oakland. May was tried by the Pirates in 1924 after being obtained from Omaha. He was farmed to Oklahoma City, recalled and finally released outright to that club with a sum of money for Pitchers Don Songer and Joe Brown.

EDGAR (RIP) MILLER, former Notre Dame guard, who has succeeded Bill Ingram as head football coach of the Navy, evidently means to install the Notre Dame system in earnest at Annapolis, as he is seeking the services of another former Irish star as assistant coach. The man he wants is none other than Marty Brill, Knute Rockne's right halfback in 1929 and 1930, and one of the country's master blockers and interferers. It develops that Ingram, who has succeeded Nibs Price at California, also wants to sign Brill as assistant coach of the Bears, but Brill's friends express the opinion that Marty will accept the Navy post because it is nearer his home in Philadelphia. If Brill goes in for coaching it will be just for the fun of it and out of his love for football, as his father is a multi-millionaire and Marty will not have to coach for a livelihood.

'31 INAUGURAL TO BE PLAYED ON APRIL 14

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Fireworks will pop for the Pirates on the very first day of the 1931 campaign of the National League. The official schedule, published today, discloses the Buccos will begin the long race in Chicago, with their hot rivals, the Cubs, furnishing the opposition. The championship season will get under way on Tuesday, April 14. It will end Sunday, September 27.

The home season of the Oaklanders also will be ushered in with the Cubs and Pirates furnishing the scrapping. Wednesday, April 22, is the date of this red letter day.

As usual, the Pittsburgh team is given more holiday and Saturday dates owing to the absence here of Sunday baseball. The Freebooters will entertain at Forbes Field on 15 Saturdays, Decoration Day, July 4 and Labor Day, morning and afternoon contests being charted for the three big holidays. Two of the Saturdays listed, however, are Decoration Day and July 4, these holidays falling on the last day of the week.

CUBS WILL BE WELCOME

The schedule places the Buccos at Wrigley Field for four days when the curtain goes up. After these exciting fights are completed the Ensmen will move on to Cincinnati, where they will mix with the Reds in three battles. The last game with the Reds will be followed by an open date and on the following afternoon, the Oakland Orchard will reverberate with the unmistakable sound of the ball and bat.

Of course, the weather will be the determining factor. The last opening day at the home of the Buccos was accompanied by a violent snowstorm, which canceled the sport after the athletes had made a strong effort to complete a game.

CARDS HERE JULY 4

The opening series at Forbes Field should be a hummer in that it brings Rogers Hornsby and his Bruins to town for four fights, the last of which is set for Saturday afternoon. The Buccaneers will shove off for St. Louis at the completion of the last contest with the Cubs.

The Cubs also will be Pittsburgh's adversaries on Memorial Day. The Glorious Fourth will see the Cardinals in action at Forbes Field. Labor Day being set aside for Dan Howley and his Redland minions.

(On request, sent with stamped addressed envelope, Ripley will send proofs and details of anything depicted by him in these cartoons.)

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: JOE RENO SPENT 406 CONSECUTIVE HOURS IN AN ARTIFICIAL SLEEP—During a wrestling match at a ball park in Dallas, Tex., June, 1930, Rajah Yogi, a Hindu magician, gave an exhibition of hypnotic powers before a crowd of about 5,000 spectators. Reno consented to be the medium of Yogi's mesmeric powers and remained under his spell for a period of 17 days and 17 nights—the world record. A DONKEY REFUSED TO EAT GRASS—Sixteen donkeys that were taken underground into the working of the Pikeview, Col., coal mines have not seen daylight for the past 12 years. Recently one of the donkeys was brought to the surface, and it was found he had forgotten that grass was good food. A cow was pastured with the donkey in order to teach him that growing grass was good to eat. FRANCIS SELDON WAS IMPRISONED IN THE BASTILE FOR 69 YEARS—In 1674, Francis Seldon, of Ireland, aged 9, and heir to one of the largest fortunes in Europe, was a student at the Jesuit College of Clermont in Paris. When, after the King's visit, the Jesuit fathers decided to change the name of the school to that of King Louis the Great, the boy commented on the change by a play of words, alluding to the King's baldness. Thereupon he was promptly denounced to the King and a royal "lettre de cachet" was issued for the child's commitment to the Bastile. His solitary confinement lasted 69 years, during which time his parents and nearest of kin died with mortification and in complete ignorance of the boy's fate. Riquelet, the Jesuit confessor of the Bastile, finally contrived to free the unfortunate prisoner, not, however, without stipulating that the tremendous fortune of the Seldons be placed under the tutelage of the Jesuit order. The story of this blood-curdling injustice is told in Remenner's "Histoire de la Bastille," Volume 4. GENDERALLY—The vagaries of the gender of German nouns are demonstrated in the long German statement in my drawing. The German words for "letter," "sheet," "envelope" and "head" are masculine, "love," "pen," "ink," "address" and "hand" are of feminine gender, while "girl," "paper" and "heart" are neuter ("sachlich.")

Lamprecht Beaten In Pan-American

EDGEWATER PARK, Miss., Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Crack amateur golfers from Chicago dominated play in the first round of the fourth annual Pan-American tournament here yesterday, seven of the eight players surviving initial skirmishes.

The biggest upset of the day came in the defeat of Fred Lamprecht, New Orleans, defending champion and strong favorite to repeat, by Don Hamilton, Chicago, 2 up.

DERBY ENTRIES CLOSE

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Vanderpool, the Tennessee stable's unbeaten colt, was the first 3-year-old to be nominated for the 1931 Kentucky Derby, it was announced at Churchill Downs today. Entries for the $50,000 added race close at midnight tonight. The derby will be run this year on Saturday, May 16.

Jim Thorpe Would Coach Dickinson

CARLISLE, Pa., Feb. 4.—(INS.)—Jim Thorpe, one of the world's greatest athletes, who set up formidable records with the famous Carlisle Indian School eleven under the tutelage of Glenn (Pop) Warner, today headed the list of more than 30 applicants for the position of coach at Dickinson College.

Lockhart, Purple Star, Lost to Team

EVANSTON, Ill., Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Bob Lockhart, star guard on Northwestern University's basketball team, was definitely lost to the squad for the remainder of the season today. He aggravated an old injury to his knee.

PANTHER SQUAD TO GET SHORT PRACTICE

By JESS CARVER.

A two weeks' cut in the fall practice of the University of Pittsburgh football squad was decided upon last night at the regular quarterly meeting of the Pitt athletic council, held at the Pittsburgh Athletic Association.

The period of fall conditioning work was reduced no less than 50 per cent, and instead of four weeks of preparation, as in the past, the Panther gridders will be given only two weeks of work before opening the season of 1931. It was decided not to send the squad to training camp until September 7.

The matter of spring practice was left to the discretion of Coach J. B. Sutherland by the council. It is not improbable that there will be a paring down there, too, and that the spring drills will be confined to one month.

Several matters of routine were taken up and disposed of by the committee.

WINDT MANAGER

Bernie Windt, a senior in the School of Business Administration, was named varsity football manager. Windt is a member of the Phi Lambda Phi social fraternity and of the Druids, honorary sophomore organization. He also is secretary of the interfraternity council.

Glenn Thiele was named varsity cross-country captain on the recommendation of Coach Frank Shea and John Butler named to succeed himself as cross-country manager.

The entrance of Pitt into the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming Association also was approved. Other members of this association include Lehigh, Lafayette, Johns Hopkins, Catholic University, College of the City of New York, Franklin-Marshall, New York University, Colgate, Rutgers, Delaware and Swarthmore.

The council also went on record as approving the ruling whereby an athlete declared eligible at the beginning of a semester may be declared ineligible at any time during the semester when his work fails to keep pace with the standards of the university.

Tonight's college basketball program for the tri-state district, like rice at a wedding or ashes on a vest, is pretty generally but not generously distributed. The card is light, but does not suffer in attractiveness, the trio of contests slated all being of outstanding class.

Possibly the most important will be played in Morgantown, where Bethany's Bisons will risk their nifty undefeated record against the rugged Mountaineers. At Grove City, the Crimson clad students of basketball as taught by the old Silver Fox, Robert Thorn, attempt to make it five out of six and work into a tie for second place in the district with Westminster by turning back the rejuvenated Geneva team and at Meadville, Allegheny, after dropping four collegiate contests in a row, hopes to regain its winning stride by submarining Waynesburg.

BISONS STRONG

West Virginia has not been overly potent so far. The Mountaineers have been beaten by Allegheny and Pitt and West Virginia Wesleyan, losing to the latter twice. Bethany, in six starts, has kept its record clear and spotless. The Bisons have a potent club, with three stars of the caliber of Flading, Telfair and Rush. Along with Pitt and the Dukes, the Bisons are the only remaining unbeaten clubs in the district, and, believe it or not, they'll battle to the last ditch, or what ever corresponds to the last ditch in basketball, to hold off the ambitious Mountaineers tonight.

After a ragged and unsatisfactory start, Geneva exhibited un-

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

A small army of former boxing celebrities of the Pittsburgh district will turn back the hands of Time tonight as they play their part in the benefit boxing show and entertainment to be staged in the Moose Temple downtown by Father James R. Cox, of Old St. Patrick's Church, to raise money for his relief fund.

Ray Eberle

More than a score of veterans of the roped arena including, among others, such outstanding figures as Frank Klaus, former middleweight champion, Jack McClelland, who fought Abe Attel and similar stars, Yock Henninger, who battled 20 and 35-round fights, Loudoun Campbell, one of the cleverest of local mittmen, Frank Morgan, Eddie Kennedy, Johnny Fundy, the featherweight champion of the A. E. F.; Eddie Wimler, Joe Korch, Johnny Kirk, Johnny Ray, Joe Keally, Patsy Scanlon, Al Grayber and Joe Chip, the only man who ever knocked out the late Harry Greb, are expected to be seated among the honor guests on the stage, to be presented to the spectators by Master of Ceremonies Ray Eberle, while in the ring, Buck Crouse and George Chip, who succeeded Klaus as middleweight champion, will spar three rounds to revive memories of their glamorous past, and Patsy Brannigan, the beloved redhead bantamweight and featherweight, who was an idol for almost two decades, will be back again for the night to display his wares against Chalky Wimler.

10 AMATEUR BOUTS

In addition to these numbers, there will be 10 amateur bouts featuring the stars of the local simon-pure talent, with the winner of each bout keeping his gloves, which will be donated by Apples Meyers, the promoter, and autographed by Father Cox. William Raper and Thomas May will furnish old-time melodies on the accordion and guitar to provide the background for the presentation of the veterans. Father Cox will make an address of thanks from the ring.

DOORS OPEN EARLY

Announcement was made today that the doors will be opened at 6:30, with the show getting under way at 8:30. Reservations may be made by calling the Moose Temple box office or Atlantic 2642. Indications are that the small arena will be packed for the occasion at the popular prices of $1 and $2.

Between Rounds

Promoter Apples Meyers has completed the card for his weekly show in the Moose Temple Friday night with the main bout Billy Thornton, Cleveland, vs. Jack Walters, hard-hitting Negro middleweight of Springfield, O., for the semi-final. Walters recently knocked out Al Iwerks in one round at the Moose as a result of which Meyers had difficulty getting another boxer to meet him.

Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, and Frankie Palmer, of Cincinnati, get the main bout at the Moose, which Palmer defeated Billy Brent of the Hill week before last. Jackie Cougan, Negro lad, meets Joe Bazone, of Mckeesport, in the opener, and Harry King, of the Hill, and Tiger Joe Clark, South Side Negro, are in the second event.

Al Ramey boxes Maxie Strub for the Keystone A. C., Erie, Friday night. A Gene Baker-Ike McFowler match is slated for Johnstown, February 26.

Virgil Kincaide will be K. O. Kelly's opponent in the main bout at Franklin, Pa., Friday night. Larry Madge and Johnny Kusic are in the semi-final and Howie Lindsay and Jimmy Taylor are in one of the preliminaries.

The card is complete for Jim McGirr's weekly show in Mckeesport tomorrow night. The McArthur brothers, Benny and Buddy, top the bill, the former taking Mickey Duris' place in a two-handed mixer at Johnstown in the main bout of 10 rounds, while the latter meets Paul Rinaldi, of Charleroi, a second time in the semi-final. Hans Roberts, of Brooklyn, and Matt Gormley, of Mckeesport, clash in the second bout, and Flick Ryan, brother of Tommy Ryan, is in with Tommy Burns in the opener.

Carl Montebano, of Braddock, will box Joe Zernon, of Cleveland, in the second bout on the Jackie Rodgers-Johnny Datto card at Motor Square next Monday night. Marcus Nole, Negro southpaw middleweight, likely will be one of the principals in the semi-final.

Jimmy Bennett, reformed knockout victory over Sidney Rose at Motor Square Garden last night, is matched to box successive knockout nights under the management of Lew Raus, former middleweight champion of the world who has converted him from an ordinary boxer into a corking good fighter. Jimmy has stopped Buddy Stewart in one round, Allen mistakable signs of snapping into some semblance of form last week when Westminster was beaten and West Virginia held to a close count on its own floor, but whether the Covenanters will be able to end the five-game victory string of the Grovers tonight is considered extremely doubtful.

GROVERS GOING STRONG

Since losing the opening game of the campaign to Westminster, Thorn's charges, and pretty sweet looking charges they are, too, have taken Allegheny (at Meadville), St. Francis, Waynesburg and Juniata in a row, four nice ones. Thorn figures that his combine of Burke, Fegley, Laycock, Statvnisky and Hildebrand can match point for point, Geneva's array of Fair, Aultman, Sole, Manning and Capt. Montgomery.

Geneva needs the victory to gain a 50-50 standing for the eight games played to date in this territory.

Allegheny needs to take Waynesburg for the same reason. Besides, the Gaitors would sort of like to even matters with the Jackets for that two-extra period game Waynesburg won about three weeks ago.

KISKI GRIDDERS GET LETTERS

SALTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 4.—Because the present system of letter awards was not in effect when Harry Stuhldreher, quarterback of the famous Four Horsemen backfield of Notre Dame and now head coach of football at Villa Nova, was a star player at Kiski, he had to wait until last night to get his varsity K.

Stuhldreher was the principal speaker at Kiski's annual football banquet here last night, and along with the 21 members of the varsity squad was awarded a letter, J. L. Marks, graduate manager of athletics, made the presentations.

Other speakers on the program included Dr. W. H. MacColl, president of the school; A. E. Mathes, basketball coach, and E. C. Sutherland, assistant football mentor.

Tribute to the memory of Guy E. (Chalky) Williamson, former Pittsburgh football and baseball star, who coached at Kiski last fall until his health forced him to withdraw, and who died recently, was paid by Marks.

Savoldi to Make Mat Debut Feb. 16

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 4.—(INS.)—Jumping Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame football star, will make his debut as a wrestler February 16 at Convention Hall here.

Gabe Kaufman, local promoter, said today Savoldi has accepted terms. His opponent has not been selected. Kaufman said the former grid star would receive $3,500 for his services.

NATIONAL PICKS SPHERE WITH THICK COVER

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Major league batsmen who slugged 1,566 balls over the fences or into the bleachers last season will have a new and "deader" ball to swing at this year.

Both the National and American leagues have decided that the home run barrage has gone far enough and a change in the ball's physical aspects is the result.

In the National League the ball will have a thicker cover and heavier stitches. In the American League, the cover will be the same, but the stitches will be heavier.

Not only will these changes take some of the liveliness out of the ball, major league officials confidently expect, but also will give the pitchers a better grip on the ball and thereby increase their effectiveness.

The pitchers, hampered continuously by all sorts of restrictions have complained for several years that the smoothness of the ball's cover has made it extremely difficult to control. The thicker stitches planned on the 1931 ball should go far toward solving that difficulty.

Proponents of the lively ball and the frequent home run need have little fear that these changes in the ball's construction will bring about a return to the days when a dozen home runs were good enough to win a league championship.

The changes are not drastic enough for any radical decrease in hitting. Officials of both leagues do believe, however, that the changed ball will result in greater pitching efficiency, a decrease in the number of "trick" home runs hit and a slump in the inflated batting averages of the last few years.

Last season, for instance, 10 players in the majors hit 25 home runs or more. Hack Wilson, of the Chicago Cubs, led both leagues with 56, and Babe Ruth, of the New York Yankees, was runner-up with 49. Other leaders were: Gehrig, Yankees, 41; Klein, Phillies, 40; Berger, Braves, 38; Foxx, Athletics; Hartnett, Cubs, and Goslin, Browns, 37 each; Simmons, Athletics, 36, and Herman, Robins, 35.

All told, the National League hit 892 home runs; the American, 674.

Followers of amateur and independent basketball in the Greater Pittsburgh district are watching with keen interest the exceptionally good records being compiled by the Goldenson Vanities, tri-state girls' champions; the Young Men's Hebrew Association's Varsity B passers and the Winged Headers, representing the Pittsburgh Athletic Association in junior basketball.

Only one defeat marks the combined records of all three teams, that being suffered by the Y. M. H. A. Varsity B quintet earlier in the season and which was avenged later by a large margin. The Goldenson Vanities and the P. A. A. teams have not been defeated, the Goldenson streak extending over a period of two years.

The Vanities at present boast a consecutive winning streak of 34 straight games over the outstanding teams of the tristate district, and tomorrow night will go after their thirty-fifth when they play in Canonsburg.

The P. A. A. passers, coached by C. DeWitt Hyatt, father of Charley Hyatt, former Pitt star and now one of the mainstays of the Los Angeles Athletic Club on the Pacific coast, have extended their winning string of games to 17 in a row.

The Y. M. H. A. Varsity B quintet, guided by Dave Mervis, former Coffey Club and Amerita Club star, goes after its eighteenth victory of the season tomorrow night when it engages the Howard Francis Five, composed mainly of former Heinz House veterans. The Y. M. H. A. youngsters have suffered only one setback, that at the hands of the Red McMahans by a one-point margin. They turned the tables on their South Side rivals in a later engagement.

The Y. M. H. A. and P. A. A. teams both are entered in the A. A. U. tournament and are favorites to win in ther respective classes.

TWO SOCCER TILTS SET

Two games will be played in the Central Soccer League this week-end, Pierpoint Motors at Pittsburgh Rovers and Crafton at Mesta. Evans will referee at Lesnie Park and Lumden at Homestead.

BOWLING ALLEY OWNERS SET TOURNEY DATE

The first annual tournament of the Bowling Alley Owners' Association of the Greater Pittsburgh district will be staged the week beginning April 13, on the Haus Alleys, North Side. The tourney will be for both men and women bowlers of the entire tri-state area.

Both the date and site were decided upon by the association members yesterday at their regular monthly meeting in the Fort Pitt Hotel. Twenty-two alley owners attended the confab, which was the largest and most successful to be held by the body since its inception.

Four sites were proposed for the first tourney. Those given consideration were, in addition to the Haus Alleys, the Melba Alleys, on Fifth avenue; Penn Recreation Alleys, Penn avenue, and the Auditorium Alleys, located in East Liberty. After much discussion as to the proper method of selecting a site, the names of the bidders were put into a hat and one drawn out.

Every member of the association guaranteed the entry of two five-men teams from the house, which assures a starting entry of 104 teams. These bowlers will also compete in the doubles and singles. The tourney is to be a non-profit making affair, all the money realized from the entry fees except that necessary for actual expenses will be refunded as prize money, with 81 prizes to be given, 25 in each event and half a dozen special prizes.

The twenty-fourth annual tourney of the Tri-State Tenpin Bowling Association will be held on the Forward alleys, Squirrel Hill, beginning March 9 and continuing through March 14.

The American Cigar Company
111 Fifth Avenue
New York, New York.

Gentlemen;

The commendable campaign against "spit-tipping" in the manufacture of cigars should receive the endorsement of all interested in the Public health.

The word "spit" is forceful, easily understood, and conveys the meaning intended.

Permission is given The American Cigar Company to make use of this letter.

Yours very truly

City Health Officer
G E Murphy

Every smoker, every wife whose husband smokes cigars, should read Dr. Murphy's letter.

"Who are the friends of 'Spit'?"

YOU MAY WELL ASK THIS QUESTION WHEN 56 IMPORTANT HEALTH OFFICIALS HAVE WRITTEN SO STRONGLY AGAINST THE EVILS OF SPIT OR SPIT-TIPPING.

Dr. Murphy writes: "The... campaign against 'spit-tipping' in the manufacture of cigars should receive the endorsement of all interested in the Public health."

The war against spit is a crusade of decency. Join it...Smoke Certified Cremo—a really wonderful smoke—mild—mellow—nut-sweet! Every leaf entering the clean, sunny Cremo factories is scientifically treated by methods recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture.

In this period of cold weather and cracked lips, above all insist on a cigar—free of the spit germ.

WINDSOR, Feb. 4.—Penalties proved costly to Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets in an International Hockey League game here last night. The Windsor Bulldogs routed the hard-checking visitors, 4-1, in a game packed with thrills from start to finish. Three of Windsor's goals came while the Jackets were short handed through penalties.

Earl Robinson, Windsor, right winger and league scoring leader, delivered three goals for the Bulldogs to tighten his grip on the sniping leadership. He scored both Windsor goals in the first period and one more in the third. Haynes accounted for Windsor's other goal late in the third period.

The Jackets put all they had into a late drive to overtake the locals, but penalties continued to handicap them. McCurry and Fraser were chased in succession. Late in the period McIntyre drew a major for clipping Duguid over the head. Haynes scored Windsor's third goal while he was off. Robinson made it 4-1 for Windsor on Haynes' pass just half the close. The lineup:

Cox	G	Benedict
Berlett	D	Arbour
Fraser	D	Bellemer
Ouelette	C	Reise
Prondock	W	Duguid

LA FLAMME SCORED

The officiating of Jerry La Flamme in the Pittsburgh-Windsor game last night indicates that he resents the protesting of the Pittsburgh-Cleveland game which he worked here Saturday night, Charles Reid, coach of the Jackets, said in a message to Roy D. Schooley, president and manager of the local club, today.

LaFlamme handed the Jackets nine penalties totaling 21 minutes and the Bulldogs two penalties totaling four minutes, and at times Pittsburgh had only four men on the ice. The Windsor victory goals were bagged while the Jackets were short-handed, and Reid contends that his men had to play what ordinarily would have been winning hockey to hold the score to 4-1. Schooley said that he probably would protest the assignment of LaFlamme to future Pittsburgh games.

PITT DEFEATS PRESIDENTS

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 4.—A sensational last half rally by Washington and Jefferson went for naught as the Prexies bowed to the Pitt Panther, 29 to 26, last night in one of the most thrilling and roughest games ever witnessed here.

Minus the presence of their coach, Doc Carlson, who is ill, and under the direction of George Kowallis, freshman coach, the Panthers put up a great fight to stave off the wild rushes of the Presidents, in the last few minutes, and had enough left to come through in the crucial moment and grab off the triumph.

It was a double deck triumph for Kowallis, whose freshman team bowled over the W. & J. plebes, 41 to 32, in the preliminary contest. The lineups:

Pitt—29.		W. & J.—26.
W. Kowallis	F	Hamilton
M. Cohen	F	Joy

Building Up Big Fights

By IKE DORGAN, The Man Behind Tex Rickard's Fistic Ballyhoos.

CHAPTER XXI.

I don't know how long Tex Rickard remained in England on his visit there following the Jeffries and Johnson fight at Reno. While he was in the Klondike, some old sourdough had sold him the idea of gold galore in Africa. He went there from England and then on to the Argentine again. He was selling his great Argentine cattle land idea. I suppose old "Tedge" talked his way in there as convincingly as he did in any other part of the world. The man could talk! He would have been the greatest patent medicine hawker in the history of the "sticks" had he elected to take that route to wealth. I'm not so sure that the old boy didn't have a whirl at peddling "Tiger Marrow Fat, the cure for all aches and pains in the back, side and chest," at some time in his career. I'll have to ask Bill Mizner about that, because Bill and Tex and Soapy Smith were all little pals together in the Klondike. Soapy, one of the great gold rush characters, cut five-cent soap bars into little ones and resold them for 10 cents.

Frank Moran.

Tex went from England to the Argentine. He thought he could bank on that British backing. After all, Tex was a great one for buying blue chips with the other fellow's money.

MORAN CROSSES PATH

In the end, they left him in the lurch. He had great dreams of a fortune to be made in hides and beef on the hoof. He had taken in $270,775 at Reno, leaving him a neat profit after he had paid Jeffries and Johnson something like $121,0000, so that he must have had quite a stake of his own when he landed in the Argentine. No matter what he had, when his English support fell out from under him, Tex was strapped. It wasn't a new sensation. It was the old, old story. Easy come, easy go.

In the end, Tex was thinking of heading for home because he was without a dime. Johnson had lost his title to Jess Willard, a fellow who, with Dempsey, later was to start Tex on his real climb to wealth and fame.

Frank Moran, who coined the expression "on the button," with reference to a punch on the jaw, had just knocked out Al Palzer.

Johnson still retained his championship at the time, but he was living a wine-swilling, fried chicken-eating life in Paris and was getting as round as a billiard ball. He wasn't to be champion much longer.

MATCHED WITH JOHNSON

This was in 1913. Dan McKetrick was Moran's manager. He was in Paris with Frank, trying to arrange a match between Moran and Johnson for the world heavyweight title. Johnson had made precious little money out of his honors. He was a fugitive from justice, having run afoul of this government because of finances, morals and one thing or another.

He couldn't come back to this country to fight without running the risk of going to the hoozgow. This he didn't want to suffer while still retaining the title. So he was glad of the opportunity to meet Moran, who had bumped off one of the best of the "white hopes." All of those "white hope" tournaments were sweet music to Johnson's ears, although, in the end, he never made any big money meeting white hope winners. Willard was a white hope product; in fact, Jess dropped a mule team jerk line to take up the white man's cause when he heard that a Negro had won the world title. Eventually he won Johnson's crown at Havana, Cuba, so the white hope idea wasn't such a bad one after all.

McKetrick finally brought Johnson to terms. There wasn't to be much nourishment for poor old Francis Charles Moran after the battle in Paris was over. It was to be a 20-round affair and Moran and McKetrick were gambling on just one thing—Moran's famous right swing—dubbed "Mary Ann" by Moran himself.

FRANK ON THE STAGE

Once the match was made, McKetrick sent word to Harry Pollock in New York to book Moran for a tour of the United States. I was doing the press work for Madison Square Garden at the time. Pollock asked me to make the trip with Moran and I agreed.

Billy Roche, the old referee, now a booking agent, routed Moran for a six weeks' trip at $750 per week. Not bad money in those days—IF you got it. Getting it was the darned old trick, as we soon found out. We started off in Pittsburgh, Moran's home town.

The manager of the show, who had a rubber-stamp prop speech for the show, took sick on opening night and I was asked to do the introducing honors, to step out on the stage and knock down Moran to the crowd.

A banner house met the home boy—the red-headed thumper who was going to get a long-looked-for chance at Jack Johnson's title. I had a honey of a speech made up. I had practiced it for an hour in the dressing room, with gestures suggested by Moran and the others.

SHOWS IN PITTSBURGH

I took two generous hookers of the finest rye that the world at large afforded and stepped out onto the stage. You talk about that last mile in the death house. That stage looked like the Sahara desert to me. I began my death march. Never had I faced footlights before.

I had just reached the center of the earth when from out of the rafters came a leather-lined voice:

"Hey you—why in hell don't you get a hair cut?"

In my excitement I had neglected to comb my locks. Mine is kinkly hair and about as straight as the winding stairs in a firehouse when well in hand and when that voice hit me I felt as if I had been boffed over the head by Babe Ruth with his pet "Louisville Slugger." I died 20 deaths right on the spot. The crowd laughed and I laughed with it. I caught a sidewise slant of Moran, in the wings, laughing his carrot head off.

We finished out our week, got our money, the first and only week-in-full, and made tracks for Indianapolis. All of the time Moran was in high glee over the prospect of meeting Johnson. He kept telling me that he was a "Man of Destiny," and would be the next champion.

Sport Vignettes

You don't have to believe it, but the tip is out that the seclusion of Dr. Cliff Carlson, the Pitt basketball coach, in a dark room for four days on account of eye trouble, is only a blind to give him an opportunity to figure out new plays for his passers . . . . Jess Carver finally has returned from that meeting of the Bowling Alley Owners' Alumni Association . . . . Billy Petrolle's knockout in 24 seconds by King Tut at St. Paul the other night did not come as a surprise to Ollie Bartlett. Tut's buddy, who boxed here last week and declared Petrolle, 'way up there as a result of his victories over Tony Canzoneri and Jimmy McLarnin, was a sap to box Tut again . . . . "Tut figures to 'take' Billy any time they fight," was Bartlett's observation, after having seen them go to it before . . . . Hack Wilson and Pres. Veeck, of the Cubs, still are trying to find out how the local gentlemen of the press learned they were in town on Monday to sign a contract . . . . The utmost secrecy surrounded their coming and they were behind locked doors when the newspapermen popped in and told 'em the jig was up, and how about them there papers?

Having solved its athletic situation in more or less elaborate style, the University of Pennsylvania next will get to work on the problem of the boll weevil . . . . B. M. Bumbera, the druggist, who has just been elected burgess of California, Pa., is the man who put up the trophy for which the California and Charleroi High School football elevens annually battle, and is rated a good sport . . . . The late Joe Bumbera, loyal son of Pitt, was his brother . . . . Johnny Freund is looking forward to returning to basketball with a team by 1950, now that the Town Hall site has been selected . . . . John Hernon, manager of Motor Square Garden, gets a kick out of a letter from a Philadelphia ice dealer who announces he is the manager of Eddie Cool, a boxer, whom he wants to show here. —HARRY KECK.

Purdue Would Meet Tech in Cleveland

CLEVELAND, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—UPurdue and Carnegie Tech may clash on the gridiron of Cleveland's new municipal stadium, now under construction, in 1932 if the efforts of Noble Kizer, Purdue coach, are successful.

Kizer, after an inspection of the stadium yesterday, said he expected to be in Pittsburgh next week and would urge the eastern school to consent to transfer of the game here. He also promised to support the move before the Purdue faculty athletic board.

Clarence G. (Buddy) Overend, graduate manager of athletics at Carnegie Tech, stated today that he did not believe the Tech authorities would sanction the transferring of the game to Cleveland.

"I cannot give out anything definite," Overend said, "and will have to wait until Kizer comes here, but I do not think the plan feasible."

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Bulls Feel Way — Local Market Narrow

BULL CLIQUES TEST MARKET FOR RISE

Some Favorites Boosted, But List as Whole Fails To Show Much Change

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 — (AP.) — Bull cliques, grown impatient with the watchful waiting attitude of recent sessions, experimentally put forward some of their favorites in today's stock market, but the list as a whole remained loggy.

The midweek business statistics failed to provide impetus to the advance, but were perhaps a little more favorable than otherwise. The bond market maintained its better tone of the previous session and, while the prospect of soldier bonus legislation still clouded the security outlook, the nervousness of the past week seemed largely to have subsided.

The weekly steel trade reviews had been expected to show little change, and indicating a gain in ingot output from 47 to 48 per cent of capacity, were favorably received. Steel said operations in the Pittsburgh and Youngstown areas were about unchanged and a little quieter at Birmingham, but this was more than offset by gains in the Chicago and Eastern Pennsylvania mills. Iron Age pointed out that 102 blast furnaces were active as of February 1, a gain of 7 during January, but still the lowest since 1922. Aggregate demand for steel products seems to be broadening a little, but automotive takings are showing scant improvement.

The weekly freight car loadings statement, covering the third week of January, showed a drop of 10,248 cars from the previous week. Loadings usually fall off in that week, but the decline was a little larger than the average. Electric power production, as reported for the last week of January, was off 6.3 per cent from 1930 and 1.6 per cent from 1929, the widest declines thus far reported in the new year.

An unexpected development in the money market was the cancellation of the recent advance of ⅛ of 1 per cent in bankers' acceptance rates, restoring the shorter maturities to 1½-1⅝ per cent. Other credit rates were stationary.

The weekly petroleum statistics showed the gratifying drop of 24,650 barrels in daily crude output, and only a small gain in gasoline stocks on hand. Standard of Nebraska reduced its dividend, the third Standard unit to take such action. Also, Ohio Oil was sold, apparently in apprehension of unfavorable dividend action.

FAVORS SINGLE BANK SYSTEM

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—All commercial deposit banking should be under one law, supervision under one authority and their reserves mobilized in the Federal Reserve System, Owen D. Young told the Glass inquiry. One trouble is competition between liberal state laws and the liberal state systems. The first principle of banking should be the interest of the depositor rather than service to the borrower. If control of our currency by the federal government were necessary in the beginning of the republic, control of banking is in the same class now, Young said, pointing out that check and transfer more than currency were used to carry on trade. He said:

"I think it highly desirable that all banks of deposit be required to be members of the Federal Reserve System."

COPPER SELLS AT 9½ CENTS

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Sales of copper have been made at 9½c a pound, equaling the low price of last October, the lowest at which copper has sold in 35 years.

BOSTON, Feb. 4.—American Smelting and Refining Company has reduced the price of lead 10 points to 4.50 cents a pound.

Rock Island Defers Action on Dividend

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad announced today that action on the quarterly dividend, payable March 31, on the common stock was postponed at today's director's meeting until the regular monthly meeting of the board March 4.

This action was not unexpected in Wall street, as the current dividend on the common stock was not earned last year. The belief had prevailed in financial circles that the directors would wait until business conditions for the year showed a more definite trend before taking action on the dividend.

Business Recovery Seen by Stephenson

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The low point in business depression was struck about December 20, says R. C. Stephenson, president of American Bankers' Association, who adds that inventories were at the bottom and buyers are coming into the market to replenish stocks. He says recovery will be gradual, with substantial advancement by the latter part of the year.

Forbes

Ownership of Stocks Shows Huge Increase

By B. C. FORBES

ONE HUNDRED and twenty-eight leading American business enterprises which had fewer than 4,200,000 stockholders at the end of 1928 had more than 7,300,000 stockholders towards the end of last year.

Mr. Forbes

This phenomenal increase of 74 per cent emphasizes how widely diffused ownership of corporations is becoming.

THE INCREASE in stockholders recorded by these companies reached 52 per cent in 1929 over 1928, a record wholly without parallel. The jump that year was from 4,200,000 to 6,400,000. Last year's gain of 900,000 represented 15 per cent, this notwithstanding the whole country's apprehension concerning the outlook for corporations and for the stock market.

NO FEWER than 12 companies had over 100,000 stockholders each on their last dividend date in 1930.

Two companies actually have more than half a million stockholders each. American Telephone has 540,000 and Cities Service Company 502,420, totals never before approached by any other companies.

THE 12 COMPANIES having more than 100,000 stockholders each are as follows:

Company	Stockholders 1930	Per cent Gain
Amer. Telephone	540,000	14.9
Cities Service	502,420	18.8

DR. DANIEL STARCH, who obtained these and other statistics covering 128 companies, says:

"THE 11 COMPANIES having the largest number of stockholders in their respective groups in 1930 were as follows:

Foods—Armour, Illinois, 80,200.

Communication—American Telephone and Telegraph, 540,000.

Chemicals—Du Pont, 40,847.

Investment Trusts—United Founders, 90,026.

Electrical manufacturing—General Electric, 97,638.

"WITH AN average increase of 158 per cent, the companies classified as automotive showed the largest percentage of gain in stockholders among the larger classifications in 1929. The oil companies with a 62 per cent average gain and the companies listed as chemicals with a 61 per cent gain were in second and third places, respectively, in 1929.

"In 1930, however, the oil companies gained 14 per cent and dropped to seventh place. The public utility group, which was fourth in 1929, gained 26 per cent in 1930, thus reaching first place. Automotive companies with a gain of 22 per cent in 1930 were second. Three investment trusts listed showed the tremendous gains of 283 per cent in 1929 and 46 per cent in 1930, the largest average gains of all the groups. All of the classifications showed an increase in the number of stockholders in both 1929 and 1930."

Assoc. Gas & Elec.	187,529
Commonwealth & So.	156,653
So. Cal. Edison	*120,000

WHETHER OR not it may be true that the "rich are getting richer and the poor poorer," it assuredly is true that more and more American families every year are becoming depositors in savings banks and investors in stocks.

STEEL DEMAND SLOWS DOWN

NEW YORK, Feb. 4. The Iron Age in its weekly summary of the iron and steel trade tomorrow will say: "January brought the first gain in pig iron production since April, 1930. Output was 1,714,266 tons or 55,299 tons a day, compared with 1,665,690 tons or 53,732 tons daily in December, an increase of 3 per cent. All of the expansion was in the production of steel-making iron, which rose 12 per cent. Merchant pig iron output suffered a further sharp decline, dropping to 9,416 tons daily in January from an average of 12,780 tons in the previous month.

Blast furnaces operating on February 1 numbered 102 as against 95 on January 1, the first gain in active capacity since March of last year. While the output for the month is noteworthy for bringing a protracted decline to a halt, it is the smallest for any January since 1922.

Steel demand has lost momentum and is increasingly uneven, with some market centers reporting that improvement has been definitely arrested. But specifications in the aggregate continue to show slight expansion. Tin mill operations have risen to 65 per cent of capacity with further gains in prospect. Rail mills continue at a 50 per cent rate at Chicago and are expected to speed up somewhat by the middle of the month.

Ingot production for the country at large now average fully 48 per cent, compared with 47 per cent a week ago.

Finished steel and pig iron prices are generally unchanged in the face of light buying. Scrap is weak in most centers, with further reductions reported on numerous miscellaneous grades, particularly in the East. Heavy melting grade is unchanged in price except at Cleveland, where it is off 50 cents a ton, and at Detroit, where it has advanced an equal amount.

Automotive demand for finished steel is not expected to show much of a gain this month. Yet estimates of motor car output are steadily being revised upward, indicating that performance is exceeding the hopes of an industry in which extreme conservatism now rules. January production of motor vehicles in this country and Canada is now placed at between 175,000 and 200,000 units, with a fair chance that official figures may reach the latter total. February car assemblies, it is now thought, may range from 225,000 to 250,000.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—Official confirmation of need of moisture throughout the entire winter wheat area led to fresh upturns in grain prices today. Government reports suggested danger that a sharp fall in temperature would cause crop damage. Opening at ¼ cent off to ¾c up, wheat afterward showed general gains. Corn started ¼ to 1⅛c higher and subsequently held near to the initial range.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Cotton opened steady today at an advance of 2 to 4 points. Business remained quiet and the early buying was supplied around 10.75c for May and 11.19c for October. Prices were holding within a point or two of these figures at the end of the first half hour.

The market became somewhat more active later in the morning and May sold up to 10.81c and October to 11.27c making net advances of about 12 to 15 points on the more active months. Trade offers, however, seemed to attract a little more hedging and realizing and the market at middday was a few points off from the best.

PERSHING KEPT KING ALBERT WAITING

The plan adopted of training with a veteran division was fairly successful considering the circumstances, and would have been ideal if the model division could have been American. The objection was that the French were inclined to be too paternal and as a rule they went little further than trench fighting.

The fact that many of our own officers were not well grounded in first principles made instruction more difficult. Recent inspections had revealed many deficiencies on the part of our officers and further confirmed reports regarding the inefficiency of training at home.

Demands of Success

Although I had suggested the establishment of a training branch of the War Department under Gen. Morrison with Gen. Blatchford as his assistant, two of the best equipped officers in our army for such work, the spirit of the recommendation was not carried out, as Morrison was not given the necessary independence and authority that a director should have, so the training of troops continued to be desultory.

After all is said, however, the success of a military commander depends largely upon his practical turn of mind, whether it be in planning and directing military operations in the field or managing the business of transportation and supply. Military science is based on principles that have been deduced from the application of common sense in the conduct of military affairs.

While high sounding terms and learned discussions of principles and maxims often enshroud campaigns and operations in mystery, yet military genius is really the capacity to understand and apply simple principles founded on experience and sound reasoning.

The necessity of professional education should not be minimized in the slightest degree. It is highly important. The best informed theoretical soldier without practical comprehension will often find his plans go wrong. To complete the qualifications essential to the successful soldier, there must be added persistence, force and personal leadership.

Hears Haig's Plans

My diary notes the following:

"Chaumont, Wednesday, January 2, 1918. Both French and British pressing us for amalgamation.

"Went to Marshal Haig's headquarters Friday by rail, accompanied by Col. Wagstaff, and spent the night. Motored through heavy snow drifts out from Etaples, gangs of "conscientious objectors" opening up roads. Discussed with Sir Douglas possible shipment by and training of American troops with British.

King Albert

As we have seen, there had been some talk of the British providing shipping to bring over American troops for training behind their lines. During the evening I spent with Sir Douglas Haig, as noted in the diary, he presented his plans for training our troops. His idea was to place the battalions as they arrived, one to the brigade, in selected British divisions, preferably those serving on the southern part of their front, and then gradually to increase the number of battalions until the divisions should become wholly American.

Sir Douglas was willing to place each of these divisions under an American general as soon as they should become partly Americanized, or do so from the outset if more desirable retaining the British divisional staffs and brigade commanders and staffs until the divisions should be at least half American, after which our staff officers and brigadiers should gradually replace theirs. He thought the sentiment against our men serving under another army might be thus overcome.

Shipping Problem Cited

Haig's battalions, when released by Americans, would be broken up to fill depleted ranks elsewhere. In this way such units as they were unable to maintain could be replaced by ours and an American army built up to take its place alongside the British.

Haig's plan contemplated that the British and American armies would both be based on the northwest coast of France. His chief of rail transportation, Gen. Nash, thought he would be able to receive our troops at Havre and send them up country without disturbing his own arrangements. However, I thought that Nash was not very enthusiastic over his commander-in-chief's idea.

Sir Douglas used arguments such as common language and the fact that American hospital units were already with the British, as well as the simplicity and expedition with which the plan could be carried out.

Any objections the French might offer, he thought would be met by building up the American Army between the two. Besides, he said this would provide for the extension of the British front and meet the demands of the French who claimed that they were holding too much of the line in proportion to their forces.

The appeal of this proposition was that we should be able to hasten our shipping program and bring to France a much larger number of men than would be possible with the tonnage then in operation.

Hoping to commit the British definitely on the question of tonnage which up to that time we had not succeeded in doing, I did not offer serious objection to the plan and even approved some of the features, especially those pertaining to the earlier part of the proposed training, and for the moment the question was left open for further conference.

Keeps King Waiting

In all these discussions the British were bargaining for men to fill their ranks and we were trying to get shipping to carry over our armies. The dickering continued until the crisis caused both British and French to realize that a lot of time had been wasted.

I left British headquarters the next morning en route to the Belgian front to pay my respects to the King and Queen. As Sir Douglas was off to London my car was attached to his train and we traveled together to Boulogne, where he boarded the channel boat and I took a special consisting of my car and one other and proceeded on my way.

We were due at Adenkirke, my destination, at a fixed hour, but to my surprise the train pulled in 10 minutes ahead of time.

I was changing into my best uniform, in fact was just putting on the right boot, when my aide, Col. Boyd, stuck his head in at the door of my compartment and said breathlessly: "General, we have arrived."

I knew it only too well, as the train had stopped and the royal band outside was playing "The Star-Spangled Banner" in the mournful cadence common to foreign bands. It was an embarrassing thought that I should be late.

In another minute when the orderly and myself were struggling this time with the left boot, Boyd again appeared and said in a stage whisper that was no doubt heard by the entire escort outside: "Sir, the King is out there standing at the salute."

Decorated by King

That was too much, the humor of the situation overcame me, and for an instant all of us, including the orderly, who rarely smiled, were convulsed with laughter. That did not help matters, of course, and meanwhile the band outside, which had already played the national air through three times was dolefully beginning on the fourth, when I hurriedly descended the steps of my car opposite His Majesty, buttoning my overcoat with one hand and saluting with the other.

At my appearance the band started afresh and, as though they had just begun, ran through our national anthem rather more vigorously, cheered up no doubt at last to see me in evidence. A few months later I had the courage to relate the incident in all its details to Their Majesties and they both seemed to enjoy it immensely.

After inspecting the escort in company with the King, he and I drove to their residence, where the Queen, in her most gracious manner, received us at the entrance. We had a very enjoyable luncheon, which Boyd thought was quite gay, especially when I became bold enough to air my dreadful French.

After lunch, King Albert, much to my surprise, said he wished to bestow upon me the Order of the Grand Cordon of Leopold, and as I hesitated, saying that we were not permitted to receive foreign decorations, he insisted that I accept it conditionally, which, of course, was the only thing to do. Boyd was decorated also.

In the afternoon, the King, with his Chief of Staff, took me to his G. H. Q. and then to the front line trenches, explaining the disposition of the limited force with which their positions were held. It consisted of only the six divisions which had stubbornly retired in 1914 in the face of overwhelming odds. It was then being recruited by Belgians escaping from within the German lines at the risk of their lives.

Recounts Familiarity

While driving with King Albert he related with much amusement some incidents of a recent visit by a party of our congressmen, and inquired whether it was customary in our country for them to be on familiar terms with the President. He said that some of them had called him Albert and one had slapped him on the back, saying, "King, you're the right sort of fellow and everybody in America admires you."

I explained to him that our Congressmen were more or less privileged characters at home and that they only meant to be friendly. As a matter of fact, I think their familiarity did not offend him at all.

During my brief visit I was particularly impressed by the extreme simplicity of the home life of the King and Queen, living there, as they were, in a very modest country place within sound of the enemy's guns and almost within range.

The Queen often went into the trenches to cheer the troops and the fine bearings of their majesties through it all made them the outstanding heroic figures of the World War.

Tomorrow: Pressure put on President Wilson for merger of our troops with French and British.

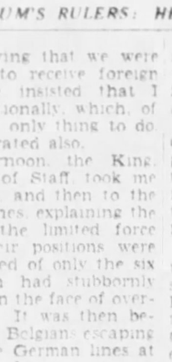
International Cement Earnings Drop Only 8 Per Cent in 1930.

Despite general business conditions last year, International Cement made a good showing. Earnings amounted to $4,527,745, equivalent to $7.12 a share, compared with $4,950,433 in 1929. The decrease in earnings, therefore, was just about 8 per cent in a year when other adverse situations existed in addition to the general industrial recession. The company maintained its policy of liberal depreciation charges, which were $3,031,030 last year, or more than $250,000 in excess of those for the preceding 12 months. More than $5,000,000 was put back into the business, strengthening International's position for the future. The financial position of the company is stronger now than ever before. Cash holdings at the end of last year were approximately $3,700,000, or about $1,800,000 greater than at the beginning of the year.



During 1930, General Railway Signal purchased 4,850 shares of its common stock at an average cost of $76.27 a share, making the total holdings of the treasury 33,400 shares, at an average cost of $78.80 a share. On the present dividend rate of $5 a share per year, the company is saving in dividend payments the equivalent of 6.35 per centage on the purchase price. The outlook for the current year is considered satisfactory as installation of a majority of the plants ordered from the company in the last half of 1930 will be begun shortly and all will be completed this year.

Best & Co. has acted better than the general market in recent periods of selling. That is due to recessions having encountered scale buying by interests who say the company has made the best relative progress of any organization in its field in the last few years. The management of the company has been recognizing the possibilities of shops located in important residential centers and resorts and has expanded in that field with notable success. The opening of new stores in 1930 resulted in increased earnings but the sales of the company have been expanding steadily since 1923, and reached $14,614,600 in the 12 months ended January 31, 1930.

General Motors developed a fair measure of activity at intervals yesterday though bids appeared to be quite easily filled a fraction above Monday's final levels. Directors of the company are scheduled to meet today for dividend action and it is expected the regular quarterly ment of 75 cents will be ordered. Preliminary figures set forth in the Du Pont report, showed General Motors' earnings for 1930 were equivalent to about $3.17 a share, indicating a sma" balance over current dividend requirements of $3. While this compares with a balance of $5.44 a share earned for the common the year before, the showing is generally looked upon as a tribute to the able management which directs the corporations affairs.

A firmer tone in the investment list was among the favorable developments of yesterday in financial markets. Government loans were especially improved in tone, with important selling absent and with dealers reporting some fairly substantial bids as having made their appearance just under the market. Evidently the investment world is veering around to the belief that the recent sharp decline in government bonds has pretty thoroughly discounted the probable outcome of the move to pay off soldier bonus certificates.

It begins to look like open season on stock market "bears." At any rate some politicians are moved to take a pot shot at the financial bruins as indicated by the introduction in the New York State Legislature of a bill which would make it a misdemeanor to have anything to do with a "short" sale of stock. This bill, which chances are will go the way of many others, would make it a misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment for six months or a fine of $5,000 or both, to be "interested in any way in short selling of stock." However, leading financial authorities are very nearly unanimous in their belief that the "bear" is an essential part of the financial machinery.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Connie Calvert shares her home and fortune with her half-sister, Kitty, whom she found destitute in New York's underworld. Kitty falls in love with Jim Tracy, Connie's former fiance. Believing Jim to be a fortune-hunter, Connie, to save Kitty, enlists the aid of Duke Garson, Kitty's friend and underworld intelligence man. He warns Connie that her butler is a crook and that her mother should guard her pearls. Later, Duke is about to declare his love for Connie when Jim appears. He claims he was held up and is afraid to go home. Connie invites him to stay. Duke doubts Jim's story. That night, Mrs. Calvert's pearls are stolen. Duke questions the maid about them. The maid doubts Kitty's honesty. Mrs. Calvert becomes ill after the excitement. Duke accuses Jim of lying about being held up. Jim says he lied because he did not trust Duke and wanted to get back to the Calvert home. Connie tells her mother that she is not sure whether she loves Duke. Duke seeks the butler's aid to solve the robbery mystery. The butler suspects the maid. While out riding with Connie, Duke says she is a new thrill in his life.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LI.

Garson's tone was so serious, so completely truthful, that Connie was startled.

"It does not please me for you to say that you are afraid of me," she said quickly. "It's not flattering, at least."

"Perhaps I should have said I was afraid of myself, afraid of the effect I might produce on others," Garson went on. "The way I have lived may have unfitted me for any other form of life, no matter how much I might desire it. When an animal stays too long with the pack it changes considerably from its domesticated brethren."

"An animal that runs too long with the pack," Connie said, "soon learns to leap at the throats and tear them."

Cites Unhappiness

"That," Garson admitted, "appears to be true, yet not inevitably so. There is such a thing, though, as a decent regard for other people," he said. "I mean—a man has no right to blight a woman's life—simply because he loves her."

It was evident to Connie that Garson had in his mind a thought that applied to her directly.

In the darkness, he seemed to be holding himself aloof from her, rigidly reluctant to unbend. She smiled silently, unseen. Men, after all, were the modest, diffident sex; she had the pleasant feeling that he was afraid of her, that her feminity, in this secluded intimacy, appeared to throw and keep him off balance.

"I mean I want you but—"

Between them both there was a breath-catching instant—an electric moment, a precarious balancing of all life on the point of a needle . . .

"But I am desperately uncertain!" he declared, in a voice, muffled with feeling. "The only thing I could bring you, the only thing I could offer you, would be unhappiness. What right have I to say these things at all to you? If whatever I said left you cold, it would all be so simple—but I'm not a fool. I know that I disorganize you. If I ask you to marry me and you said yes, your whole life might be ruined. I'm afraid I've strayed too far from the beaten path of humanity to bring happiness to a girl like you—and you couldn't follow me into—into my jungles."

Her eyes, grown accustomed to the darkness, saw that his face was haggard, his hands restless; but she didn't avoid his stark gaze. He was thinking of marriage as a necessary fulfillment of love, and to her, that combination was incidental to the fact that her own heart was melting.

"You are very thoughtful," she said, in a straight voice.

Moving forward, disregarding all he had said, Garson took her into his arms and kissed her with steady, prolonged intensity. Her eyes closed; she surrendered wholly, her senses swimming.

"I shouldn't have done that," he said, drawing back; but his speech was only mechanically apologetic. Connie, her eyes limpid, as dark as ink, had no reply; something had gone out of her virginial reserve, forever.

Connie Confused

Released from his arms, she felt herself weak and wavering. Against the cushion of the seat she fell back supinely. What she had invited had come upon her, with the stunning effect of a collision; as though a great weariness, she could see what was happening to her; for more was involved than any surface stirring of the senses. The instinctive, age-old habits of automatic defense were dead, killed.

"I shouldn't have done that," he reiterated. "You shouldn't have let me."

"I couldn't help it," she whispered.

With an involuntary, irresistible movement he took her again into his arms and their lips met, magnetically intoxicated, flame-like with eagerness. No effort came from Connie to avoid him; she responded to his embrace with an urge as compelling as his own. When he released her, she was confused in her mind, as though she were emerging from a faint.

"We couldn't help it—it was all taken out of our hands, Connie," he said tenderly. "Words, language, are nothing in the face of—the other."

A dazed smile was her only answer, a giant weariness gripped her whole body. But he was right . . . a force stronger than their intellects had decided everything for them.

"There is only one thing left for us to do," he said, his voice laboring out of turmoil. "We can't have anything stand between us now. It would be too—too tragic. We won't let ourselves risk being carried apart—separated by accident."

"You must know best about that," she agreed.

But coherent thought, orderly intentions, were storm-tossed in the rising tide of their emotions.

"I wanted to spare you the risk of being bound to me," he articulated. "I want for you all happiness . . . not just these things . . . these earthquakes . . ."

There were other words, but they were lost, tossed up, swept away, in the intense electrical charge of their embrace. . . .

DAILY TRUE STORY 'Sublimation'

Doubtless you know Horace Patterson—not the one I am writing about, but others quite like him, except in the matter of name.

The best way to describe Horace is to explain that he was the sort of man known as Minerva Patterson's husband!

There you have it in a nutshell.

Close acquaintances of Minerva and Horace—one would never think of saying "Horace and Minerva"—marveled at their marriage. Not that there were any reasons from a social or moral standpoint against the matrimonial alliance, but because they were so different, mentally.

Horace was studying construction engineering. An immense concrete dam, a perfect highway or a skyscraper would thrill him.

Minerva did not look down into foundation excavations, she looked up to the stars, as it were; she got her thrills from the rythmic beat of the wings of Pegasus, from learned explanations of the libido and from the psychic.

At the time, Minerva and Horace had but another month before they were graduated, they became engaged. As soon as they were graduated they were married.

To Minerva this marriage meant but a natural phase of life, for she didn't really know what love was.

Fortunately for Horace he became connected with his uncle's big construction concern in a fair-sized and growing city and within five years would have been completely happy save for one thing—Minerva's lack of interest in his success and especially her lack of interest in Horace, himself.

Minerva's interest was in fact that she was already vice president of the Woman's Higher Thought Society of her city and that she was called upon to go here and there, even out of the state, to lecture before sister societies.

Wife Objects

Just as Horace kept right up to the last second in all that pertained to construction, so did Minerva continue her study and research into what pleased her to describe as the higher plane of life and thought.

Horace would come home and if Minerva didn't happen to be away lecturing, she would join him at dinner. He would be full of enthusiasm over his work.

"Well, my dear," Horace would say, "I closed the contract for those new canal locks today, my plan of a two-drop over a four-drop was voted the best—it means something like a quarter-million profit for us."

"Indeed," Minerva would say, showing about the same degree of interest as she would if he had told her that the Ahkoond of Swat had a toothache.

Horace telephoned home one afternoon.

"Will you throw some things in my suitcase, my dear?" he asked.

"Why?" she demanded, coldly.

"Have to run up to Chicago to sign a contract for next year's supplies."

"Not tonight, Horace?"

"Sure."

"Out of the question. I am entertaining our society and a delegation from the stage societies. Longson is catering and I don't want it said that you sneak away in my big moments like this."

Horace should have yelled at her that she never had a big moment. Instead he said, "I'll postpone it, dear."

Gives Definition

Minerva talked on "Sublimation." She was heartily applauded and very much pleased with herself, so pleased that after the guests had gone she turned to Horace, who was stifling a yawn, and said, "You have occasion to be proud."

"Always proud of you."

"Not of me, of my talk on Sublimation."

"Yes indeed."

Her eyes blazed. "You slept in your chair when I talked. I saw you—you haven't an idea of what I said, you do not even know the meaning of the word!"

"To sublimate is to convert a solid to a vapor and back to a solid again, thus refining it," Horace told her proudly.

"You are utterly impossible, crass—material. Sublimation is to transfer your animal energy to other channels of creative energy."

Horace went up to his room without a word. Minerva did not suspect it, but Horace had ceased to love her at that moment.

For fully a year he did not let her suspect that he had ceased to love her, he did not let her know how, every time she gave him a scornful glance, he desired to give her a good beating physically, not psychic.

Horace came home early one afternoon he was going up into Canada on a fishing trip. He wouldn't go without informing Minerva, because he was square that way. Servants told him that Mrs. Patterson had taken some books and a writing folio down into the sunken garden.

Horace went to explain why he would be absent some weeks.

Just as he was about to go through the high hedge to the sunken garden he heard Minerva scream. He stepped through the hedge and saw an extremely large, muscular and disreputable looking man trying to take the rings from Minerva's fingers. She was struggling and yanked one hand loose, the man slapped her face. Horace actually grinned. God! How many times of late he had wanted to do that.

"Get out, you little fool!" he growled at Horace.

With one spring Horace was on him. Horace seemed to the burley man to be a combination of tiger, puma, wildcat and mule's hind legs. The man finally went down with his face horribly battered and his head dented in where it struck a corner of a statuette of Buddha (Minerva's selection, that statuette).

"Horace," Minerva gasped, "I didn't know you could fight like that!"

"Sublimation," Horace said.

Minerva stared at him. "What do you mean?"

"Your definition of sublimation is to transfer your animal energy to other channels of creative energy. All right, for a year I have wanted to give you a good sock right on the end of your snooty nose—"

"Horace!"

"Shut up! This man here turned and gave me a scornful look and called me a fool. You often called me a fool and you often gave me a scornful look. So I just imagined for the moment that this man was you, and I lit into him and beat him up the way I have wanted to do to you for many a month!"

"Why—why, Horace—I didn't understand. Really, I didn't mean to—it's terrible to think you hated me—I never hated you, honestly, I regretted your materialistic nature—"

To Accompany Husband

"You mean that you have loved me right along, despite everything?"

"Certainly, I regretted your inability to grasp the higher things of life—"

"Oh, let up on that. I'm going up in Canada, fishing, at a big camp; lots of men there with their wives. Everything is very material up there. If you want to come along with me and prove what you said, about loving me, go pack up right away. If not, when I return, it won't be to this place."

"Goodby!"

Horace turned and threw water on the man, who sat up, then got up and started to run. Horace let him run.

Minerva was gone. He went inside to pack.

Minerva was already there, hastily packing to go with him.

I was walking glumly down the street. I was in the dumps. My bankers had refused to lend me money for speculation unless I could put up three times the amount of the loan in collateral. The Town Hall Site

Selection of Schenley Farms Location Will Increase Citizens' Pride in Civic Center.

Cheerfulness is in order, for the county commissioners have at last chosen a location for the Town Hall, and promise to proceed at once with its construction. The great auditorium, which Pittsburgh has needed and desired so greatly, is to be erected on the Nicola property in the Schenley Farms district.

Let us forget the disagreeable things that might be said about the way the commissioners have handled the business. Let us suppress the doubts that arise as to the wisdom of their choice. Let us ignore the disadvantages of the site, and look only on the bright side of the matter.

The Town Hall will increase the importance and attractiveness of the Oakland civic center, and enhance the citizens' pride in it.

The property will cost the taxpayers less than some of the other sites that were proposed.

The people are already accustomed to go to Oakland for meetings, entertainments and shows. They are familiar with the neighborhood through attendance at Carnegie Institute, Syria Mosque, Forbes Field, Memorial Hall, Pitt Stadium, Duquesne Garden and other institutions. It will seem natural to have the Town Hall in the same locality.

Pinchot's Road Program

There is Nothing to Cause Alarm in Governor's Proposal For Highway Construction.

In submitting the budget to the Legislature yesterday Gov. Pinchot spoke of his program for road-building as the largest undertaking of the sort ever contemplated by any highway department.

But there is nothing in the proposal to cause the taxpayers alarm.

The Governor not only is not asking that taxes be raised but is proposing that automobile license taxes be reduced.

The plan to have the state improve 20,000 miles of township roads is a gigantic one, but Pennsylvania is accustomed to constructing highways in a big way.

During the last four years the commonwealth expended $235,062,215 on 4,028 miles of new construction. The Highway Department received in that period $119,737,681 from motor license fees, $90,274,765 from the gasoline tax, $13,497,602 from federal aid, $20,273,980 from local contributions and $8,556,038 from miscellaneous sources.

Pinchot's proposed highway expenditures for the biennium are included in the $140,000,000 that he plans to spend on jobs that will furnish work to idle men. The amount asked is not exorbitant, and there is no public work better suited for the relief of widespread unemployment than highway construction distributed throughout all the townships in the state.

Postmaster Nominated

Senator Reed Has Done Well in Giving Position to Man Who Has Risen From the Ranks.

Senator David A. Reed has atoned, at least in part, for his long delay in choosing a postmaster for Pittsburgh by nominating James B. Anderson for the place.

Mr. Anderson has been employed at the Pittsburgh postoffice for many years. He has risen from the ranks. This not only gives assurance that he is familiar with the work, but will prove encouraging to other postal workers by holding out to them the hope of promotion.

Senator Reed has been pondering the appointment since last summer, when Postmaster Gosser resigned. He is said to have given it as much study as he would have devoted to a judicial appointment.

In the meanwhile a postoffice official from Washington has been running the local office. There have been no complaints of his management, but the citizens have felt that a Pittsburgher should be in charge, since there can be no question that no outsider, however efficient, could be as familiar with local needs as a permanent resident.

One story has it that Senator Reed was looking for a satisfactory business man to whom to offer the place. If that is so, it is just as well that he did not find him, since the testimony is unanimous as to Mr. Anderson's ability.

Coal Rate Differentials

To the Layman the Western Pennsylvania Coal Traffic Bureau's Request Seems Modest.

The Western Pennsylvania Coal Traffic Bureau, representing Pittsburgh coal operators, yesterday asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to increase the spread between freight rates on coal shipped from Pittsburgh to the Great Lakes and coal shipped from West Virginia to the Great Lakes.

They asked that the spread be increased in certain cases from 35 to 80 cents.

The making of freight rates is a mysterious business; but to the layman the request seems reasonable and even modest.

Consider this: It costs $1.46 to ship a ton of coal 172 miles from Pittsburgh to the lakes. From Kanawaha, W. Va., the distance is 370 miles, and the rate is only $1.81.

How anyone can argue, in the face of this situation, that the Southern West Virginia operators are not unduly favored, it is hard to understand.

Winter Visitants

Snowy Owls and Goshawks Raise Some Questions Which Naturalists Cannot Answer.

A Great Northern or snowy owl, weighing 10 pounds and with a wing spread of 63 inches, has been killed in Butler County. The huge white bird naturally aroused a great deal of interest.

A few goshawks have also been killed in Pennsylvania this winter. The State Game Commission offers a bounty for killing them.

Goshawks and snowy owls are Arctic birds, living ordinarily in latitudes north of the tree line.

Some winters they come south in considerable numbers. Naturalists know a great deal about these birds, but they have not yet succeeded in finding satisfactory answers to questions raised by their periodic flights.

One theory is that the birds are driven to our latitude by a scarcity of the lemmings and ptarmigan on which they ordinarily feed. But that is only a theory.

There is much to be investigated by those who desire to make contributions to science.

Still confined in narrow quarters
On the steep bank of a river,
West Point long since has outgrown
Its restricting reservation.

Land required for expansion,
Greater space for modern training
Should be added by the Congress
Without more proscrastination.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Love's Astigmatism

The things for which a man picks a woman out, before marriage, are often the things for which he wants to THROW her out after marriage.

The very qualities in a girl that intoxicate him during courtship often drive him to drink after the honeymoon.

Before marriage nothing seems to stimulate a man's ardor like sweet indifference. He wants to do his own chasing and his own love making, and nothing puts out the flame of his love so quickly as a warm blanket of response.

But after marriage the human iceberg is supposed to melt and become a torrent of warm affection, spontaneous petting and fervid kisses. And half the flirtatious side-stepping husbands in the world will offer as their alibi "cold home kissing" and wifely frigidity.

Before marriage a little flattery goes a long way. Too much of it makes a man suspicious of the "hook." But after marriage you can't lay it on too thick. The woman who tells her husband three times a day how wonderful, generous, noble and superior he is can cook with a can opener all her life and still be his Ideal Woman. A compliment a day keeps the divorce lawyer away.

Before marriage a girl's coquettishness and her popularity with other men pique his interest and flatter his vanity. The average man chooses a woman not so much because he admires her as because OTHER men admire her.

But after marriage her cooing little come-hither ways either madden him with jealousy or fill him with disgust when he realizes that they are nothing but cheap vanity, and that he is only "one of a crowd."

Elusiveness and uncertainty give a real "kick" to the love chase and make a girl seem doubly desirable. Nothing so dulls a man's interest in a woman before marriage as to find her always just where he expected.

But once he has captured and married a woman he wants her to be as handy as the old pipe, as reliable as his watch and always right "there," like his office desk and his fountain pen. He wants here to stay DOCKED.

REVEALING PLUTO AS A PLANET

By Archibald Henderson

Shortly after the discovery of a trans-Neptunian celestial body by the astronomers of the Lowell Observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz., discussion was rife as to the nature of this new body. After weeks of careful investigation, the astronomers at Lowell Observatory pronounced it to be a planet. A number of astronomers in both England and Europe, as well as a few in the United States, raised doubts as to the nature of the new celestial object. Some even went so far as to pronounce it a comet.

The difficulty arose from the very small number of observations on the object, which was exceedingly remote. It is essential to know the exact position of the object at a good many different times over an extended interval of time, to be able to determine the eccentricity of the body's orbit; for the path of the object, which is of necessity that of a conic section, is determined directly from its eccentricity.

By means of a few positions known, the eccentricity was estimated; and certain astronomers actually plotted the resulting orbit of the body, and found it to be cometary.

By great good fortune, new and earlier data regarding the body has now been discovered. Officials at many observatories searched through thousands of photographs to see if they could discover the body caught on any of the plates. It was so tiny that it might well have escaped their notice. Finally several photographic plates made in 1919 showed the body beyond any possibility of error. These new positions, combined with those already known, supplied the additional data needed to determine with considerable reliability the orbit of the new body.

It is now definitely determined that the new body, known as Pluto, is really a planet revolving in space beyond the orbit of Neptune. The orbit has been determined, after elaborate calculations, by Dr. Seth B. Nicholson and N. U. Mayall at the Mt. Wilson Observatory. At first the astronomers, who believed it was a planet, calculated its orbit from the original meager data, and concluded that it was an extremely elongated ellipse. Other astronomers believed that it was still more elongated, and that it would take many thousands of years to make a circuit of the sun.

It has now been found that the eccentricity of the orbit is .25; and consequently the orbit is elliptical, not differing greatly from circular. Pluto will revolve around the sun in a "year" equal to 251.8 of our years. It is now approaching the sun, and will reach the nearest point to the sun on June 5, 1988. At that date it will be 2,700,000,000 miles away from the sun, about the same distance as Neptune, the farthest known planet until Pluto's discovery. The newly computed orbit agrees with the position of Pluto shown on a photograph made in Brussels in 1927.

Isn't It So?

No one is born without faults; he is best who is beset by least.

The way to succeed is to keep your feet on the ground and stay out of the way of traffic.

The girls used to be terribly shocked if you commented on the shape of their legs. Now they're shocked if you don't.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

"BUSINESS IS GOOD WITH US. Lachman Bros."

I do not know Lachman Bros. I have never happened to trade there. But I will trade there if opportunity presents. I will trade there because confidence like that attracts me and inspires trust.

Ever consider confident people? Ever notice how people flock around them? Probably you have. And, if you're human, maybe it made you mad.

"The big bluffs," you've snarled to yourself. "They know that things aren't as rosy as they pretend. They've got troubles just like anyone else, but they like to put on an act . . . like to pretend that nothing gets their goat. And people fall for it, the poor saps. Wonder why. Why do blowhards like that get such a big hand and honest people, who frankly admit that things look bad, get passed by?

You've said that—haven't you? I've said that. What's the answer? Why do people admire and bet on the man with the confident grin and pass by the honest gloom? They do. In business or private life, it's always the same—the Beaming Booster gets them.

Is it because they are too shallow to reason . . . that they're distracted by any loud noise, any joyful front? No—it's deeper than that.

People admire strength, follow and trust strength—or the appearance of strength — because they need strength. In all our hearts there is fear and bewilderment. Life is filled with danger and distress. We know that we can conquer these things if we have sufficient courage! But we haven't always the courage. So we lean on those who have.

Do we really think that they have conquered life? Do we think that they are never frightened or bewildered, themselves? No, we know perfectly well that they haven't—and are. But we know that they have built armor for themselves. Some may call that armor "bluff"—may say it's "just putting on an act." That doesn't matter. The name does not change the quality of the performance. Bluff—noble, constructive bluff—is bravery. "Putting on an act" is the very essence of courage.

Brave people are brave, not because they have no grief, face no risk, but because they stand steady and serene in the face of grief and risk. It takes a great and wise soul to bluff in the face of reality. And the soul that can do it . . . the soul that can write, in challenging letters, against a stormy sky —"Business is good with us," gets our vote. And business will be good with that man. It will be good because he has the courage to imagine good luck, the strength to affirm it.

Why do people follow the beaming booster? That's why. Because he has the goods . . . the goods they need.

Why are glooms never popular? Why are cautious people never good leaders? Why do we despise the bleater, even when he's telling the truth? Because we already have enough misery in ourselves—we don't need any more.

Want popularity—power—success? There's your recipe.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Sometimes One Comes

Sometimes one comes who brings a word
For which in vain we sought,
And yet no whisper ever stirred
Across our depths of thought
Until this messenger appears
One day from out of the blue
To satisfy the quest of years
With meanings strange and new.

Whence does he come? Why is he sent
Revealing every vague intent
In a forgotten past?
What is the purpose, unconfessed,
Behind the vast design,
And what the use of many a test
Before bright beacons shine?

Sometimes across the world comes one,
Unheralded, unknown;
And then blind gropings all are done,
He brings to us our own!

Superstitions Die Slowly

Even the Intelligent Japanese Retain Some of Them

EXORCISING A DEMON THAT DWELT IN A STONE

The above photograph shows the main railroad station in Tokio. The gentleman in the foreground wearing a uniform is the station master. Standing beside him, near the table or altar, are the High Buddhist Priests of Kyoto, solemnly engaged in driving a devil out of a stone.

The stone which had been part of a tomb was built into the platform of the railroad station. According to the belief of the station master and of others assembled, including the High Buddhist Priests, a demon lived in that stone and did much mischief after it became part of the railroad building. The demon did not like being moved away from his tomb. Enraged, that vengeful demon, using his strange powers, had done wicked things.

To begin with, quite recently Hamaguchi, prime minister of Japan, was shot by an assassin and seriously wounded in that station. And this happened on the very spot where a previous prime minister had been assassinated.

The station master decided in his simple mind that something must be done about the demon.

He removed the stone that had been part of a tomb, and had no difficulty in detecting the fact that a demon lived in it, a particularly vicious demon. Oriental peoples are great respectors of tombs, and would be surprised to see us Americans ripping up graveyards in order to make room for suburban real estate improvements.

When he had removed the tombstone, the station master sent for the High Buddhist Priests of Kyoto, and here you see them going through prayers and exorcisms to make the demon leave the stone and go about his business somewhere else.

Perhaps there WASN'T any demon in the stone, perhaps he wasn't responsible for the accidents.

And perhaps these High Buddhist Priests of Kyoto are going through their mummery and flummery without any real result, as regards influencing the demon.

But they make a living, which they must do, and they restore the peace of mind of the chubby little station master at the end of his wits.

Their exorcisms will comfort the population that will come back to the station with confidence, hearing that the demon has been driven out.

Even if an exorcism isn't quite according to scientific facts it is a good thing some times to believe it if it gives peace of mind. We might import those Buddhists to exorcise our slump.

This picture illustrates the fact that superstition dies slowly everywhere, not only in Buddhist nations and here in our own Christian country. If you doubt it, ask your friend to walk under a ladder, or pick up a pin with the point toward him, or come and dine with 13 at table. And don't treat this chubby Japanese station master too superciliously. Your American fellow citizens spend $125,000,000 a year on fortune tellers

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Writers, as well as actors, are often happy victims of the fabled lucky break. The other week an aspiring novice, after working five days completed seven pages of a magazine article and suddenly stuck smack in the middle of a sentence.

He tried vainly to carry on but could not crack the spell of sterility. Finally he snatched the page from the machine with a mental vow to quit the game forever. On the verge of tearing up the manuscript, he, instead, placed it in an envelope and mailed it to his literary agent.

With the article he sent what he intended to be his literary swan song. It was a despairing line: "The very best I could do!" In a few days he received an urgent message to call on his agent at once. He was definitely through.

The agent was in a furore of excitement. He had forwarded the article to a weekly magazine and the editor had phoned his enthusiasm. The agent explained the editor liked especially the brevity—"the abrupt ending. That unfinished sentence!" the writer sat dazed.

And the agent gabbled on: "He wants you to write more in the same tempo at once." There are many instances of such miracles. Anita Loos wrote "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" to amuse herself. It was carelessly tossed in an old desk.

One day she gave it to a friend to read and afterward to tear up. Instead he rushed to an editor—and the world knows the astonishing result. Will Rogers was a good comedian but the one thing he couldn't do was write. "I can't," he drawled, "even spell."

For such reasons no one should tell another he cannot write. Had many top notchers today heeded the advice of critics they would be punching time clocks in planing mills and spoke factories. Persistency wins in writing as well as in other endeavor.

London, too, is giving Hollywood a theatrical raspberry in a comedy called "Nippy." But Hollywood is used to jeers. The producers hooted as "ex-button hole makers" lounge in the patios of million dollar castles and try to bear it. Dear, dear!

A threadbare gesture on the stage these days is for a performer suddenly to resort to something grotesque like a tough aside when things become too pretentious. In one of the revues a plumed lady in a grand stairway entrance moves majestically to the bottom step, hoists her skirt, suddenly spits through her teeth and waddles off with a Chaplin walk and Eddie Foy grin. It's grand.

A moment-ago caller was a gentleman whose calling card announced him as Ort Orpen. He is a book agent and got in slickly by declaring he had been sent by a publisher. His visit was no annoyance whatever, but I wish he hadn't come. I can't quit yapping his name.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Foolish to punish yourself in order to retain a feeling of antagonism toward some other person.

Why is it that you will not permit yourself to forget the feeling you have toward the one you dislike?

It is to be hoped that your mind is not so depraved that it gets real satisfaction from thinking over imaginary injuries you might inflict on your enemy.

If you can think with satisfaction upon causing suffering for those you dislike to that degree, you are losing control of your better self and allowing the devil to push you into trouble and you are to blame.

When your mind can picture all sorts of misfortune for another it is a serious matter and you should be alarmed.

Taking revenge into your own hands or permitting another to do it for you is the result of a diseased mind and you should recognize the fact and get yourself out of the state before you do irreparable damage.
